Army, Court Controversy In Hawaii at White Heat

Outcome Expected To Set Authority Precedent for All Areas Under Attack

By the Associated Press

General expectation here last night was that the issue of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in Hawaii may be brought to the President or even fought up to the Supreme Court—unless executive departments reach a settlement agreeable to the territory's authorities.

A series of conferences among the War, Interior and Justice Departments began last week, and officials of the three agencies said yesterday they would continue until some solution was reached.

The outcome is expected to set far-reaching precedents for military-civilian relations in American areas which come under enemy attack or become subject to such attack.

Dispute Reaches Climax

The dispute itself reached a climax in Honolulu Wednesday with Federal Judge Delbert Metzger's imposition of a $5000 fine on Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., and the Army's prompt issuance of restrictions to prevent enforcement of the judge's order.

Richardson's stand was backed up by the War Department which issued this statement here:

"Refusal of Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson to submit broad questions of Hawaiian defense to the decision of a Federal Court in the test cases brought to put an end to martial law has War Department approval."

In a separate statement, John L. McCloy, Acting Secretary of War, contended that the judge "erroneously construed" the return of some governmental functions to the civil administration as ending martial law. He added:

"Conferences are now in progress which it is hoped, will shortly result in solution of the difficulty."

Involved in the issue is whether the writ of habeas corpus, by which the Bill of Rights guarantees a man his day in civilian courts, remains suspended under partial martial law, thereby giving military authorities the right to hold prisoners without trial.

Control Taken by Army

With the Japanese bombing of Hawaii, the Territory was placed under a military government which, civilian officials there contended, delved so deeply into the most ordinary civilian activities as to jeopardize the very freedoms for which the United States is fighting.

They asserted that prior to

Rejected By Army

4-F Maryland Youth Jailed Under 'Work-or-Fight' Law

By Lin Celdon
Post Staff Writer.

A Laytonville, Md., youth, who had been rejected by the Army, yesterday was sentenced to 30 days in jail in Rockville Police Court under Maryland's so-called "work or fight" law on complaint of a farmer he refused to work for "at prevailing wages."

The youth, Stanley Day, holder of a 4-F classification, and obviously not a physically fit man according to Army standards, was sentenced by Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt and prosecuted by Assistant State's Attorney Alfred D. Noyes.

Day was charged with violation of a law passed last spring, that says all men in the 14 Maryland Counties in which the statute applies, between the ages of 16 and 60, must work five days a week, if not in the Army, a clergyman, or on vacation . . . provided they are able.

Noyes admitted he made no official inquiry of the local draft board to determine if Day would fight if given the opportunity. He said his knowledge of the man's rejection was gained through others.

Judge De Lashmutt, in discussing the case last night, said he had not consulted draft board records prior to finding the man guilty. The judge said: "We are sending men away from this country to fight. Those who stay at home must work." The judge failed to take into consideration the fact Day had been inducted and was rejected and, therefore, obviously did not come under any complaint that he "refused" to fight and therefore should be made to work for an employer not of his choice or be jailed.

The name of the farmer who made the complaint was a vague memory in Noyes' mind. He said he believed the complainant's last name was "Buzzard," and that he was a near-by farmer. According to Noyes the farmer said Day had worked for him both before and after his Army rejection, but had become dissatisfied and quit his job.

Day was then arrested and taken to court and at no time was he given benefit of counsel or medical testimony.

Day confirmed the fact that he had refused employment offered by the farmer, and this, construed as

Center of Convenience

U. S. to Buy Hotel Near Station For Use of Service Personnel

The Government will buy the Capitol Park Hotel on Union Station Plaza for a servicemen and women's center to replace the proposed two-story building that was to have been constructed in the same vicinity for enlisted men, Baird Snyder, acting Federal Work Administrator, announced last night.

The Capitol Park Hotel Corp. and the Government have agreed on a price of about $400,000, and the Department of Justice has asked the District Court to approve the figure.

The hotel, with 127 rooms that are to be renovated to increase sleeping capacity to well over 250, will provide essential conveniences to transient officers and enlisted personnel of the armed forces of the United Nations, Snyder said.

The center will remedy the problem of soldiers, sailors and servicewomen, who during train layovers in Washington, have been unable to find accommodations, and in some cases have resorted to park benches or sleeping while leaning against a wall of the overcrowded service center in Union Station.

The accommodations for men and women will be entirely separate and the center will be operated by Recreation Services, Inc., for the War Hospitality Committee of the District of Columbia.

Operation will begin as soon as the deal is approved and the hotel can vacate tenants.

The proposed building, to have accommodated only 250 enlisted men, would have cost about $350,000. The decision not to build it will save material and labor. It was after the building was proposed the Government learned the hotel was interested in selling out.

Details of operation are being worked out by representatives of the FWA Public Buildings Administration and Recreation Services, Inc.

As soon as stability of operation is attained moderate charges for services will be made, and the center will probably become self-sustaining, Snyder said. The parking lot adjacent to the hotel will continue to be used as a parking lot and yield added revenue, he said.

"It should be made plain that it will not be a social center," Snyder said. "It is a service center to provide essential conveniences and decencies. There will be sleeping and napping facilities, a restaurant, canteen lounge, showers, tubs for laundering and, if possible, washing machines and ironers."

Shortage Feared

Month's Search for Outside Milk Sources Proves Futile

The District's imperiled milk supply took a serious turn for the worse last night when Bruce B. Derrick, executive secretary of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, revealed his organization had spent a fruitless month attempting to locate adequate milk supplies to supplant an anticipated shortage in the Washington milk shed.

Local retail milk handlers said they had expected to supplement the local milk supply with that "imported from other milk sheds and expected to get it through the Maryland and Virginia Association."

Derrick said, however, that they had (1) been unable to find any milk within shipping distance of Washington and (2) transportation facilities were lacking.

He pointed out that the drought conditions in the Washington milk shed were extremely serious and getting more so each day.

From the Weather Bureau came still more dismal news with the prediction that any showers in the area yesterday or today would do little or no good to repair drought damage and there is "still no end to the drought in sight."

Derrick asserted that the longest safe haul to bring milk and cream is 150 miles, if it is shipped in cans and that each car thus hauled requires five tons of ice.

A slightly longer haul is possible for tank trucks and tank cars because of the better refrigeration.

"There is a real shortage of ice," Derrick said, "and on top of that we cannot find the cars and we cannot find the tanks."

But, he insisted they were still unable to find the milk within safe hauling distance of the city, even if the transportation was available.

He said there would have to be imported 200,000 tons of hay, 400,000 tons of grain and a large quantity of protein feeds, if the dairy herds were to be maintained during the winter.

The Department of Agriculture could do this, he said, if they would cut the red tape.

In the meantime, he said that milkshed streams where the cows normally drink have dried, springs are nearly dry and some of the wells in the area have gone dry.

'Back the Attack'

Antics of War Dogs at Show To Prove Their Status in Army

Dogs of war will go through their paces before the thousands of visitors to the great Army show "Back the Attack," September 9 to 26.

With the moving in of the Quartermaster Corps on the Washington Monument Grounds yesterday as a part of the vast exhibit of weapons, fighting equipment, stores and operations, came the announcement that a War Dog team from a nearby depot would be a part of their exhibit.

Canines, proven in World War I, and now regularly trained by the Army have seen action on many fronts during the present conflict. Their valor and skill of attack are highly praised by the troops with which they work in the field and on the battle fronts.

The Quartermaster Corps has erected a huge assembly tent on the exhibit grounds measuring 158 by 40 feet to house many other exhibits besides the dog team and miniature theater of operations.

Meanwhile Military Police from the Military District of Washington have been assigned to the Monument Grounds for night guard duty. Guards on duty during the daytime are from the National Park Police.

The total construction force now working full time to complete the background for the Army's greatest show numbers well over 100.

The rolling green slope of the Monument Grounds, which but a week ago was unbroken, was alive with activity. Construction in the chapel is going forward and the Top Commando Flies to Capital, Has War Talk With Adm. King

By the Associated Press

The staff conferences which Lord Louis Mountbatten began yesterday with high-ranking American military leaders will be followed in the near future by similar discussions in Chungking with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek before a campaign is begun against the Japanese in Burma.

This was learned last night after Mountbatten, appointed as Allied supreme commander in southeast Asia, arrived by plane from Canada to talk with Army and Navy officials.

At the same time, these aspects of plans already made and others yet to be formulated were reported:

1. The main objective of Mountbatten's operations will be to increase the present trickle of supplies to China to a flood, indicating a general Burma campaign, although attacks also may be made in Malaya.

2. Mountbatten's staff is not yet chosen in its entirety, but will have a British chief of staff, an American—already selected but not identified publicly—as deputy chief of staff, and probably an American deputy commander in chief.

3. Some of these appointments, possibly the direction of the campaign itself, depend to a large extent on the outcome of his discussions with the generalissimo in Chungking.

4. There is no optimistic feeling in the Allied high command that any Burma campaign can be cleaned up quickly. On the contrary, the consensus is that it will be long and difficult, and while operations probably will begin late this fall, the objective may not be achieved within a year or longer.

The famous 43-year-old Commando chief stepped from an Army transport at the National Airport at 2:46 p. m. yesterday and within minutes had gone into conference at the Navy Department with Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet and chief of naval operations.

More Talks Today

While the strategy meetings were in progress, Secretary of the Navy Knox told a news conference that Mountbatten was the "best man for the job" he has been given, and that he has the full confidence of American military leaders.

The conferences will continue today with Army ground and air officials headed by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and possibly will include a talk with Secretary of War Stimson, according to a British information spokesman.

In late afternoon, Mountbatten

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 26.—Waves of Lightning fighters, shooting their way across Italy at treetop height, opened one of the war's most successful air attacks yesterday, followed by Flying Fortresses and Liberators smashing Foggia airdrome, its 10 satellite fields and the railroad yards into smoking ruins.

Completely surprising air and ground crews, the twin-tailed Lightnings darted over their targets with cannon and machine guns spitting a hail of lead which cut down swaths of fleeing Germans and Italians and set strings of bright fires in hangars and planes.

Then the Liberators and Fortresses, in successive waves, roared onto the scene and tumbled their heavy loads of high explosive and splinter bombs onto the fields which were left a ghastly chaos of craters, flaming buildings and blackened aircraft.

Axis Flatfooted

At least 26 enemy planes were knocked out of the sky in the all-American attack, raising to 175 the total of Axis aircraft destroyed in air battle since last Thursday. Scores more were wrecked on the ground and from 200 to 300 dead and wounded were left in sprawling windrows, it was announced at Allied headquarters. In all operations, 15 Allied planes were lost.

The Axis planes caught flatfooted had been assembled in southern Italy to meet a possible invasion of Europe from the Mediterranean and included Junkers 88 bombers and Junkers 52 transports. The bombers represented the bulk of the once great bomber fleet which Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring, Axis air leader in Sicily, had based on the island until systematic bombing of his bases before the invasion there compelled him to withdraw them to the Italian mainland.

People Wave Greeting

The presence of the transports indicated the Axis had despaired of keeping either the railways or highways of Italy open to military traffic in the face of the terrific Allied air attacks and therefore were dependent on aircraft to haul personnel and materials.

Raids Leave Berlin in Panic As Flames Still Sweep Capital

Freak Light Caused By Bomb Aids in Crippling of Airdrome

By International News Service

Stockholm, Aug. 26.—Berlin has been burning steadily for three days and the thousands of incendiaries scattered over the city by the RAF appear to be causing even more extensive damage than the bombs dropped, travelers from the German capital reported tonight.

Buildings throughout Berlin were still burning beyond control when these travelers left for Sweden and all the capital's fire apparatus and other emergency equipment seemed powerless to cope with the conflagration stirred by the nightly raids.

Templehof Airdrome was so badly wrecked that no planes could leave from that famous airport, and plane passengers able to obtain reservations were taken several miles through smoke-choked streets to auxiliary airfields. The smoke was so dense the airline buses had to use their headlights even in daytime.

Half-Million Germans Seek Refuge in Poland As Attacks Continue

Heavy Allied bombers were heard crossing the British southeast coast again late last night, but whether they were bound for another attack on Germany remained uncertain.

London, Aug. 26.—Bombed and burned Berlin, raided for the third night in a row, was tonight reported being deserted by its panic-stricken population with 500,000 fugitives already in Poland.

As Mosquitos kept up their "insomnia" tactics on the German capital for their second night straight, the British Broadcasting Corporation said the Nazi government was arranging to scatter itself to occupied territory.

Late this afternoon US Eighth Air Force Marauder medium bombers, with RAF, Dominion and Allied Spitfires running interference, rained new explosive destruction on Nazi airdromes at Caen in Normandy.

U. S. and Britain Limit Approval; Russ Recognition Appears Outright

(See the editorial, "French Committee," on Page 10.)

America, Great Britain and Canada last night cautiously gave qualified and limited recognition to the right of the French Committee of National Liberation to administer the empire of fallen France, only to be outdone within a few hours by Russia, which recognized the committee with a declaration that it represents all the state interests "of the French Republic."

The announcement of the Western Allies tendered a friendly and helpful hand to the Frenchmen, but it failed to call their ruling committee by that one vital word—government.

In statements so similarly worded that they showed evidence of joint composition, perhaps in the recent Quebec conferences, the two governments chorused that it would be up to the people of France to choose their own government once the Nazis are routed.

"The Government of the United States," said a statement issued in President Roosevelt's name, "recognizes the French Committee of National Liberation as administering those French overseas territories which acknowledge its authority."

Russia and Brazil Act

(The Moscow radio announced last night that the Soviet Union had recognized the committee "as the representative of the state interests of the French Republic."

(A dispatch from Rio de Janeiro last night said the Brazilian Government also had recognized the committee.)

(Russia recognized the French committee as "the leader of patriots fighting against the Hitlerite tyranny."

(The Russian recognition appeared to be full and without qualification, in contrast to that granted by the Anglo-American Allies.

(The British announcement, for instance, said that the organization of Gens. Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud was being recognized "as administering those French overseas territories which acknowledge its authority and as having assumed the functions of the former French National Committee in respect of territories in the Levant."

Stockholm, Aug. 26.—Neutral Sweden tonight had a new issue to take up with Germany—the reported North Sea sinking of two Swedish fishing boats by three German destroyers.

The Swedish foreign office said naval authorities had started a swift investigation of the story told by fishermen of three other boats which, they said, managed to elude the Nazi attack that sent two down in flames off Denmark, with a possible loss of 12 lives.

If confirmed, the foreign office said the government would consider the case "extremely serious," and the worst of a series of such incidents involving the Nazis since 33 lives were lost in the sinking of the Swedish submarine Ulven April 16.

Reaching here from Goeteborg, where the fishermen were said to have fled, this story was told in a dispatch of the newspaper telegraph

Russians Rout Germans West Of Kharkov

Nazi Counterattacks Beaten Down in Relentless Red Chase

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Aug. 27.—The Soviet steppe army pursuing German troops retreating toward the Dnieper River west of Kharkov gained three and one-half miles yesterday, wiping out 800 enemy rearguards, routing two battalions and capturing several villages, Moscow announced early today.

Numerous enemy counterattacks were beaten down in the relentless chase across the hot Ukraine plains, the daily communique said, as the Russians under Gen. Ivan S. Konev broke into villages and reduced them in bitter street fighting.

Swinging south of Kharkov the Russians also were driving toward the key rail junction of Lozovaya. Six hundred Germans were reported killed and 22 enemy tanks destroyed or disabled in heavy fighting in that direction.

The bulletin gave no indication how far the Russians had advanced west of Kharkov, but the first big goal apparently is Poltava, 75 miles to the southwest on the railroad leading to the Dnieper, another 75 miles beyond.

One Russian column already had by-passed Poltava on the north in a direct plunge toward the major goal

Welles' Resignation Leaves Russia Without Champion

By Drew Pearson

Now that Sumner Welles has exited from the State Department to satisfy the whim of his chief, Cordell Hull, many people in the Government, including several Cabinet members, are wondering:

(1) Whether the State Department will now function as a cohesive unit:

(2) Whether we will now have a cohesive foreign policy as far as Soviet Russia is concerned. The military ends of the Government, especially though they do not necessarily approve all things about Russia, are tremendously concerned about future cooperation.

Although Welles has been played up by the senatorial friends of Hull as leader of the lone dissenting group inside the State Department, actually the Department long has consisted of four separate baronies which do not make for cohesion. They are:

1. Secretary Hull, himself, who has around him a small, worshipful group which gathers every afternoon when the weather is fine to play croquet, and which includes: Jimmy Dunn., political adviser on European affairs; Green Hackworth, the legal adviser; Assistant Secretary Breckinridge Long; Russian-born Leo Pasvolskey, economic adviser, and Wallace Murray, political adviser on eastern European affairs.

2. Sumner Welles, who has built up several bureaus dealing with Latin America which answer chiefly to him, but who also has tried to work with all the geographic divisions of the State Department.

3. Assistant Secretary Dean Acheson who plays a lone wolf game, trying to get on with all factions, but frequently tries so hard not to tread on others toes that he makes no progress himself. Acheson is chiefly concerned with economic and legal problems.

4. Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle, an original Roosevelt brain truster, brought into the State Department by Welles, but who has established a following of his own, reaching into various corners of the State Department.

Of this group, it is significant that all except Acheson (and Welles, who has now departed) have established long records as haters of Soviet Russia. This, at a time when Russia must necessarily play such a dominant part in writ-

Radio Censor Admits Deleting Paraphrase of Lord's Prayer

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Aug. 26.—Duccio Tabet, a censor and translator of Italian programs for radio station WOV, who admitted he was a former officer in the Italian army and at one time a member of the Fascist Party, testified today he censored religious programs and at one time paraphrased part of the Lord's Prayer "to prevent misinterpretation."

Testifying before the Cox Congressional Committee hearing into the Federal Communications Commission, Tabet said that the line: "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us" was paraphrased to read: "Let us forgive those who enacted by anger or driven by the hidden force of Satan have attempted to offend us."

Tabet's explanation was that it was his job to "prevent anything against the war effort from going on the air."

He said he helped to formulate the censorship code for that station and that one of the rules of the code read: "When one talks of peace he must in every case first state that the victory of America is necessary for humanity to find its peace."

In line with this policy, he testified, the quotation "Peace on earth, good will toward men," which was broadcast at Christmas time was paraphrased to read: "Peace on earth, good will toward men and victory for America."

Tabet added that the paraphrasing of the Lord's Prayer had never been broadcast because in his capacity as censor he deleted it.

Tabet said he came to this country in August, 1940, on a "political refugee's visa." Although not asked his religious faith, Tabet told reporters he was Jewish and that he and other members of that faith had to leave Italy after the Fascist regime adopted some of Hitler's anti-Semitic decrees.

Tabet said he would like to go back to Italy and help establish a democratic form of government there. In answer to the question, "Do you think America permits anyone to interfere with its religious worship," he admitted that he should have talked the matter over with the program director of the station before making the changes he had made.

Hawaii's Army-Civilian Court Row May Produce Precedent

partial restoration of civilian authority early this year freedom of the press in Hawaii had vanished, that labor had lost its traditional rights, that trial by jury had disappeared, and that justice was meted out through provost courts.

Territorial officials contended further that the Army had assumed control over the personal life of everyone in the islands—including his dog. And they pointed to the military governor's order setting a curfew for dogs at 8 o'clock as proof.

The military government, they said, had issued regulations governing press, labor, courts both civil and criminal, municipal affairs, operation of taxicabs, garbage disposal, hospitals, transportation and growing of vegetables, numbering of houses, dispensing of liquor, civilian defense, public health, prisons, insane asylums, price and rationing control and sale of gasoline.

This was the situation in Hawaii when its Governor, Ingram M. Stainback, came to Washington last December to seek restoration of powers to civilian authorities.

After weeks of conferences, an arrangement was agreed upon by which 18 powers were restored to civilian authorities but the writ of habeas corpus was to remain suspended and martial law was to remain in effect.

Judge Metzger ruled that if the jurisdiction of the courts was restored in part, it must be restored in full, including the right to grant a writ of habeas corpus.

He ordered that Richardson bring into court two American citizens of German ancestry who allegedly have been held incommunicado by the Army since shortly after Pearl Harbor.

One man, Edwin R. Seifert, says he is charged with anti-Semitism. The other, Walter Glockner, says the Army charges he gave the Hitler salute in 1938 and invited friends onto a visiting German boat.

General Richardson's refusal to obey the writ of habeas corpus led to the fine for contempt, and his order preventing its enforcement.

Declaring the islands might be attacked again Army officials asserted it was the duty of the Army to defend the Territory "in every possible way" as a protective measure for the entire United States.

"We cannot disclose to the world everything we know," they said, "but there is military necessity for a condition of martial law to remain in effect in Hawaii."

To Confer With Biddle

Meanwhile, Justice Department officials said they expected to confer with Attorney General Francis Biddle to determine their future course of action.

They said that although they had up to this time been representing Richardson and the Army, they were not sure what their future stand would be.

A department spokesman declared his belief the general had acted contrary to advice of the Justice Department, but did not explain in which instances.

There the matter rests for the time being, but the question among congressional observers here and officials of civilian agencies of the Government is:

What would the Army do if the United States mainland became another Hawaii—attacked by enemy bombers? Would constitutional rights be suspended?

The answer, they say, will be found in the solution to the Hawaiian problem.

Lord Louis Arrives

HERE TO PLAN STRATEGY—Wearing immaculate dress whites, Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, newly-appointed Allied supreme commander in Southeast Asia, steps from a transport plane here upon arrival yesterday to hurry away from National Airport to confer with US Admiral Ernest J. King, Navy chief took an hour off to meet officers and newspapermen at an informal party in the Carlton. He answered questions off the record while listeners ringed him four and five deep.

Mountbatten will leave Washington late today or tomorrow, probably to return to London before proceeding to Chungking.

He indicated he had no plans for further discussions with President Roosevelt before he leaves for India to take over his new command.

"I reported to him at the Citadel (in Quebec)," he told reporters on his arrival at the airport.

"I feel very honored to have been appointed to the southeast Asia command," Mountbatten said.

"As you know it is an Allied command, and I am particularly proud that there will be United States forces and British forces fighting side by side with our Chinese Allies until we have finally thrown out the Japs and the final victory is won."

To a reporter who inquired whether he had discussed campaign plans with Mr. Roosevelt, Mountbatten replied with a grin and a wave of the hand:

"Sorry, can't discuss plans. You didn't really expect me to, anyhow, did you?"

French Unit Given Limited Recognition

ported the following to the French Committee on National Liberation:

("The government of the USSR having acquainted itself with the declaration of the French Committee for National Liberation, has decided to recognize the French Committee for National Liberation as the representative of the state interests of the French republic and leader of all French patriots fighting against the Hitlerite tyranny and to exchange its plenipotentiary representation.")

The British statement, in London, added that recognition was accorded also to the committee's "having assumed functions of the former French National Committee in respect of the territories in the Levant."

United States recognition was made "subject to the military requirements of the Allied commanders." While the British went a bit farther and spoke of "consultation with the committee" in applying the principle of committee authority, it was apparent that neither went as far as the committee had desired.

It was three months ago that De Gaulle and Giraud officially brought their combined forces into existence as one movement. After much wrangling the two factions sought through unity to gain authority and speed their common effort—liberation of France.

Mr. Roosevelt said that while the United States was recognizing the committee "as functioning within specific limitations during the war," he specified: "This statement does not constitute recognition of a government of France or of the French Empire by the Government of the United States."

Reserved to Commander

The British set out that "during the war military needs are paramount and all controls for operational purposes are in consequence reserved to the supreme commander of Allied armies in the theater of operations."

The American Government, Mr. Roosevelt said, "takes note, with sympathy, of the desire of the committee to be regarded as the body qualified to insure the administration and defense of French interests. The extent to which it may be possible to give effect to this desire must, however, be reserved for consideration in each case as it arises."

He added, and the British spoke likewise:

"The Government of the United States welcomes the committee's expressed determination to continue the common struggle in close cooperation with all the Allies until French soil is freed from its invaders and until victory is complete over all enemy powers.

"May the restoration of France come with the utmost speed."

Cuba was the first country to establish diplomatic relations with the De Gaulle-Giraud committee, acting August 13. Recognition by the Belgian government-in-exile followed Wednesday.

The Anglo-American failure to grant full recognition followed previous expressions of policy that: in war, military needs come first; with France unable now to choose leaders, no government of France could be said to exist.

Factional divisions between followers of De Gaulle and Giraud have been cited as contributing to unwillingness to recognize full authority of any French ruling element now.

But since July 31, the two factions were joined under the military leadership of Giraud and the political directorship of De Gaulle.

Cementing Welcomed

Mr. Roosevelt's statement welcomed this cementing, saying:

"It is our expectation that the committee will function on the principle of collective responsibility of all its members for the active prosecution of the war."

There was no mention in either statement as to financial dealings, and presumably French assets in this country, totalling $1,300,000,000 at the time of their freezing June 17, 1940, continue subject to the requirement that withdrawals need Treasury licenses.

Yank Airmen Batter 11 Airfields Near Foggia, Italy

biggest flight at such low height in this theater, were greeted by friendly waves of the people as they skimmed along at less than 100 feet.

(The roundtrip was at least 440 miles from the nearest Allied air bases in Sicily, 800 miles from Tunisia.)

Italians and Germans stopped to hurl rocks and chunks of wood and fire their pistols in impotent rage at the low-flying raiders.

The daring and successful unorthodox attack on Foggia, 80 miles northeast of Naples, was accompanied by an attack on the rail center and naval base of Taranto by RAF and Canadian Wellingtons before dawn this morning. Bursts and fires from two-ton bombs spread across the freight yards despite a smoke screen thrown up by the defenders. Antiaircraft fire at this important base was negligible.

Liberators and Halifaxes from the Middle East also hit Crotone on the gulf of Taranto Tuesday night, damaging a chemical plant and causing many fires.

Other Lightnings and Warhawks, sweeping the Italian toe, strafed a 20-car troop train at Potenza and five locomotives at Sapri, and attacked other cars, engines and road transport at Rochetta, Lucera and Sinoli.

The extreme low level of the Lightning attack apparently threw the whole Foggia area into confusion, making the enemy's detection devices useless and upsetting the antiaircraft gunners.

The first waves riddled rows of JU-88 bombers and JU-52 transports before a shot could be fired at them.

Enemy planes tried to get off, but few made it, and one big JU-52 crashed in flames, as the Lightnings arrived at deadly precise intervals of five and ten minutes.

While the enemy gunners were still stunned by this terrific strafing, the Liberators from the Middle East command arrived and began hammering the railroad yards with 130,000 pounds of bombs. The Liberators shot down seven enemy fighters, which had managed to get into the air from some of the satellite or nearby landing grounds.

The Fortresses, which appeared on the smoking scene half an hour later and blanketed the airfields, had to fight their way through a swarm of 60 to 100 enemy interceptors and shot down 16 of them. The Lightnings themselves accounted for three more.

European Jews' Harrowing Plight

New York, Aug. 26.—On the eve of an unprecedented five-day American Jewish Conference opening here Sunday to consider the plight of European Jewry, the American Jewish Congress today issued a 310-page report detailing the shrinkage of the Jewish population in Axis territories from 8,300,000 to a little over 3,300,000.

Of the five million who have disappeared from countries under Nazi domination, the report states, some three million have perished since the war began four years ago, 1,800,000 have been evacuated into the interior of the Soviet Union and about 180,000 have emigrated.

The report, with documented and harrowing details of the extermination of three million and the living death of the 3,300,000 still existing in Nazi ghettos and concentration camps in eastern Europe, was compiled by the institute of Jewish affairs of the American Jewish Congress and the World Jewish Congress.

Frontoni Reported Suicide

Bern, Aug. 26 (AP).—Rome dispatches to the Swiss telegraphic agency said today Count Alessandro Frontoni, former member of the Fascist Party directorate, had committed suicide in his Rome apartment. No details were given.

Canadians Rest For Future Task

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 26 (AP).—Canadian troops were withdrawn from the latter stages of the Sicilian fighting to give them a rest and to prepare for future operations, it was disclosed today as the Canadian commander in chief, Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, toured Sicily.

"The Canadian army can be used in whole or part as the needs and prosecution of the war dictate," General McNaughton told reporters in Sicily.

War Food Bureau Has Crop Loan Plan

Scheme Announced for Potatoes Could Be Applied to Other Products

After numerous excursions into the food subsidy field, usually by the quick trial-balloon route that could be abandoned anywhere along the way, the War Food Administration has hit upon a loan and redemption plan it believes can be applied to many crops without a serious congressional backfire.

Announced for Irish potatoes, the plan avoids mention of the controversial words "subsidy," "Government purchase and resale" and "incentive payments to farmers"—but combines the elements of all three.

It offers potato growers loans in excess of the support price already announced for potatoes—20 cents per 100 pounds more on those held until December 1 and an additional 10 cents for the portion held until January 1. This is to pay storage costs and insure orderly marketing throughout the winter months.

Redemption Price May Drop

At any time, to prevent deterioration of the potatoes, WFA "reserves the right to permit redemption below the loan values." The grower who had gotten a loan of $1.50 on a bushel of potatoes, for instance, might be permitted to redeem it for $1.25 or less. Consumers would get the benefit of the reduction and WFA would stand the loss of the difference.

There is no reason, WFA officials said yesterday, why this plan could not be applied to any other crop that can be kept on the farms a reasonable length of time. If the reaction from Congress and farm groups should be unfavorable, however, there is no indication such a program would be extended.

No Trouble on Hill Wanted

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones has made it plain he wants no trouble "on the hill." In a radio speech tonight he is expected to tell the Nation's farmers he favors support prices for all the major food crops they will be asked to produce in 1944, but to make it clear the final say on this guarantee must await congressional approval.

Elections are too near and the opposition too strong for the Administration to risk arbitrary food decisions or additional "surprises" such as the consumer subsidy on meats and butter. All future "surprises," it is believed, will be loaded in favor of the man who grows the food.

1943 Food Output Rises 5% Over 1942

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones said in New York yesterday food production this year would be 5 per cent above that for 1942.

"Starvation is not just around the corner this year, and never was," he declared.

Local Shortages

Mere Gas Gain Not Enough To Ease Curbs

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

A slight increase in petroleum products along the East Coast was reported by the Petroleum Administration for War yesterday, but the agency again warned that revocation of present gasoline restrictions may be put off unless consumption is brought within allotment.

The supply rose 2.3 per cent from 34.5 per cent to 36.8 per cent of normal the week of August 21, but the gasoline situation still is plagued by local shortages, Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes declared.

Certification Exceeded

Ickes said the Middle West and Southwest as well as the East consumed more gasoline than was certified to those regions.

Ickes warned, "If consumption is not in fact kept within the limit of current supply which is certified as available, it is obviously impossible to arrive on schedule at the inventory position which is prerequisite to the planned liberalization on the East Coast."

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown disclosed two days ago that he still planned to lift the pleasure ban September 1 as promised, but he withheld assurance as to whether the value of gasoline coupons would also be increased sometime in September as originally expected.

Transportation Improves

Ickes reported that greater transportation is now being provided for petroleum products and progress is being made toward the equalization of supply over the entire area east of the Rocky Mountains.

At to rations, Ickes said, "Increased rations of gasoline for the East can be accomplished only if added quantities are made available for eastern shipment in the Middlewest and Southwest.

"This calls for reduced consumption in these areas which to date has not been realized. Likewise, the East Coast has not lived within the amounts allocated to it."

Yanks and Aussies Less Than Mile From Salamaua

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 26 (AP).—After an advance of one mile in two days, American and Australian jungle fighters were less than a mile from the vital Salamaua air base on the northeastern coast of New Guinea today.

A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur said the troops had reached Kennedy's Crossing within a mile of the southeast end of the air strip. In the communique two days ago the Allied soldiers were reported to be two miles from the Japanese stronghold, the capture of which put Allied fighter planes within easy range of Japanese bases on New Britain Island.

Except for the announcement by the spokesman there were no other developments in fighting in New Guinea or New Georgia, where the Americans are seeking to wipe out the last Japanese garrison there after taking the Munda air base.

Adverse weather conditions practically suspended all air activity.

Postwar Changes in Population, Trade Needed to Aid Employment, Report Says

By the Associated Press

The National Resources Planning Board said yesterday that "major readjustments between population and industry will be required after the war" if employment is to be maintained—and emphasized that Government accept the responsibility.

The agency, which goes out of existence next week, issued a lengthy study called "industrial location and national resources," in which it said:

"The task of aiding private industry in providing economic opportunities for men to be demobilized from the armed forces and from munitions industries will demand careful attention both to the conversion of war production centers to peacetime activities and to the establishment of new industries based on the resources of under-developed sections of the country."

Big Federal Investment

The board, killed by Congress which refused appropriations except those necessary to wind up its affairs by August 31, announced it would publish later, probably in September an additional study proposing ways in which some of the postwar industrial readjustment may be achieved.

The study released yesterday as submitted to President Roosevelt, said:

"By the end of 1943 the expansion of our manufacturing facilities for war production purposes will total approximately 18 billion dollars, more than 15 billion dollars of this investment representing Federal funds.

"Through this tremendous investment we have not only vastly increased the Nation's manufacturing plant, but we have brought about important changes in the geographic pattern of manufacturing.

"The consequence of these changes will have a permanent influence on the growth and development of the Nation. Because of these great changes both private industry and local, State, and Federal agencies of government have become increasingly aware of the necessity of giving careful thought to plant location decisions. This report has been prepared to meet the growing need for objective analysis of locational problems."

Detailed Analysis Later

Such detailed analysis was promised in the next study. The present study is intended to provide industrial executives and public officials with a basis for evaluating the locational distribution of industry and for measuring likely changes in this pattern.

During the war, the report said, many plants have been located in areas which manufacturers would not normally have chosen for their operation.

"Consequently," the report added, "major readjustments between population and industry will be required after the war if a high degree of employment is to be achieved on a peacetime basis."

New Bone Flour Promises End Of Dental Decay

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Discovery of a resistant that makes humans immune to dental decay was reported today in the Journal of the American Dental Association by Dr. S. G. Harootian, D.M.D., of Worcester, Mass.

He said a "striking" decrease in caries (dental decay) was noted in patients at the Worcester State Hospital who were given flour made from the bones of beef animals, which contain great quantities of calcium, phosphorus and fluroine. The experiment lasted nine months.

Use of the bone flour, Dr. Harootian said, resulted from an investigation made in Deaf Smith County, Tex., where the population was found to have a low incidence of caries.

Soldier Gets Life For Raping Actress

Muroc Air Base, Calif., Aug. 26 (AP).—An Army court-martial today convicted Pvt. George Paul Rimke of raping and robbing Lina Basquette, prominent actress in the days of silent films, and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Representatives of the Muroc public relations office said Rimke can appeal the conviction and sentence to the War Department, and finally to the President, if they are upheld.

Bulgarian Ruler Is Reported Ill

By the Associated Press

King Boris of Bulgaria has been seriously ill for three days and is in the care of specialists, including German physicians sent to Sofia on orders of Adolf Hitler's headquarters, the Berlin radio, quoting an official Sofia communique, said last night.

The broadcast said the 49-year-old King was suffering from angina pectoris and that "the patient's condition is indeed giving cause for perturbation."

of Kiev, Ukraine capital 170 miles beyond Zenkov, which the Soviets captured Wednesday. This Red army group was within 45 miles of the Kiev-Poltava railway and other lines criss-crossing the central Ukraine.

In the Donets Basin, the Russians said, Red troops killed 2000 Germans and destroyed 48 tanks yesterday in fighting south of Izyum and southwest of Voroshilovgrad. Whole trainsloads of ammunition and other booty were captured in lunges which were encountering and absorbing frequent Axis counterattacks, said the communique, recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

Konev, whose troops captured Kharkov Monday and rushed on through the city after the withdrawing Germans, was raised from colonel general to general yesterday, a Moscow broadcast disclosed. Markian M. Popov, whose troops seized Orel and are now fighting 25 miles east of Bryansk, likewise was made a full general.

Popov's troops burst into a series of German trenches on the Bryansk Front yesterday and captured them after grim hand-to-hand combat, the communique said. But this action, in which more than 100 Germans were killed, was listed only as a reconnaissance operation.

The tone of the Russian communique suggested that the Germans were withdrawing toward Poltava, threatened as they are by the Soviet units flanking them above that citadel.

A Berlin broadcast estimated that the Russians already had recaptured about 5800 square miles of Ukrainian territory, but sought to disparage this gain by saying this represented only one-thirtieth of the whole Ukraine.

A Berlin broadcast said: "German military circles are convinced that the deeply echeloned defense zone on the eastern front, even if certain corrections should still be carried out, will become the death wall for this year's Soviet offensive."

The German communique, broadcast from Berlin, said the Soviets lost men and territory in their attempts to break through in the Donets Basin. West of Kharkov, it said, the Russians were repelled in man-to-man fighting. It claimed 253 Soviet tanks were annihilated in one day.

The Moscow radio announced that Lieut. Gen. Peter Volokh, identified as a tank expert, had been killed in action in the Izyum sector of the Donets Basin front.

Nazis Stiffen Gestapo Powers

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels was reported by the BBC to night to have explained the delegation of broader powers for Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler by saying:

"Never before in her history has Germany been in such deadly danger as today, and coercion at home is necessary if Germany is to remain strong."

Grin and Bear It . . . By Lichty

"You hear that, Snodgrass? A $$200,000 shortage . . . I suppose that means we lose another employe!"

Nazis Use Baby To Trick Father, Then Shoot Him

London, Aug. 26 (AP).—How the Germans used his crying baby to trick a Belgian into a confession of espionage and then shot him was described in a booklet on "Punishment for War Crimes," issued today by the Inter-Allied Information Committee.

The document depicted a mounting wave of terror and oppression throughout Europe as the conquered peoples prepare for the coming of the Allied liberators.

While the Belgian had not seen his family in many months, he refused to talk. Then the Nazis placed his wife and child in an adjoining room. He heard his wife talking and the baby cry "Daddy."

In an ecstasy of hope, the unfortunate man gave in. But instead of opening the door to the family, the Germans immediately jumped on the prisoner and beat him until he collapsed. Then he was dragged by the feet into the courtyard and executed on the spot.

Two Swedish Fishing Boats Sunk

agency TT (Tidningarnas Telegrambyra):

Flying the neutral Swedish flag and with blue and gold Swedish insignia painted on their sides, the boats were operating close together in international waters of the North Sea, off the northwest tip of Denmark last night.

Sweeping in from the direction of revolt-torn Denmark where the Nazis nervously expect a possible Allied invasion try, the destroyers fired a salvo of warning shots, then opened point-blank fire on the fishing fleet when only about 50 yards away.

Two boats went down flaming. At least three others escaped—fleeing so swiftly they were unable to see whether the warships picked up the victims. If not, 12 Swedes may have lost their lives.

The incident comes in the same month that Sweden ordered the Nazis to stop shipping German troops and supplies across her neutral soil by railroad. The Nazi military traffic between Germany and Norway and Finland had operated for three years, and success of the Swedish cessation order provided another cue for the angry Danes across the sea, already revolting against the Nazi rule. They promptly increased their sabotage and strike campaign against Nazi transportation across occupied Denmark, tightening up troop and supply movements throughout the Baltic area.

Berlin Reply Awaited

The submarine Ulven was sunk in Swedish territorial waters, apparently by a German mine—the same day that a German merchant ship fired on the Swedish submarine Draken, which also was in territorial waters.

Since then, a Swedish naval torpedo boat has been fired on by the German gun crew of a Norwegian freighter, a Swedish plane has been fired on over the Bay of Bothnia and German planes have been reported over the Swedish naval base at Karlskrona.

At the time of the Ulven incident, Sweden had been waiting a Berlin reply to protests over Nazi mines in Swedish waters.

Japs to Put 1500 On Exchange Ship

London, Aug. 28 (AP).—Tokyo radio reported today that about 1500 Americans and Chileans will be included in the second exchange of American and Japanese nationals.

The broadcast said the agreement provided for the exchange to be made in the second week of October at Mormugao, Portuguese India. A Japanese exchange ship will leave a Japanese harbor between September 10 and September 20, the announcement said.

Are we ready for Act II—
the collapse of Nazism?

This is one of the most timely, vigorous and provoking articles ever to come from Dorothy Thompson's vigorous and provoking pen. It seems so sure to arouse wide and energetic debate of a great public question, that the MERCURY took its September issue off the presses and ripped it open to present it without delay.

Are we ready for Act II? It may not come for a year—it may come next month. No matter when it does come the question is a momentous one. And Dorothy Thompson says a flat "no" to it and warns us that we had better get ready on the double—or else find ourselves in some impossible situations. And disasters.

The Anglo-American demand for Germany's Unconditional Surrender, she maintains, "is meaningless and may even prove catastrophic," unless we decide immediately which groups within Germany we intend to support. For the fight for power between those groups must result in chaos—and another name for that chaos is Revolution. And it can be Revolution towards us—or away from us.

Dorothy Thompson draws on her long intimate knowledge of Germany, of those warring groups within Germany, to put a little handwriting on the wall. With cogent and striking logic she warns us that if we attempt to handle the collapse of Nazism the way we did the crack-up of Fascism in Italy, we are headed for blood, sweat, toil and tears which will be of our own making.

"What Will Happen When Nazism Collapses?" is in the September issue of THE AMERICAN MERCURY, on the stands now. If you have been left confused and angry because Italy so far has refused to come up to our fond expectations, then this plain-talking article is for you.

Smokes, riots, glasses and other things

Besides this stimulating article by Dorothy Thompson, you will find in the September MERCURY a rich and varied choice of reading.

Have you the "nail in my coffin" worry every time you smoke? Then read "The Truth About Tobacco," by Robert H. Feldt, M.D. Were you chilled by Attorney General Biddle's warning that there would be more race riots? Then read "How To Prevent Race Riots," by Winifred Raushenbush. Do you secretly wonder whether Saroyan really is as wonderful as a lot of people—including Saroyan—say he is? Then "Minority Report", by Philip Rahv, should delight and comfort you. Or if the pros and cons of the Jewish homeland confuse and perplex you, you should react strongly to Maurice Samuel's "Jews Who Fight Zionism."

Perhaps you'd like to know more about the history of Vice-President Wallace—maybe you've wondered about Aldous Huxley's crusade against eye glasses—or why no song hit has come sweeping out of this war...

Almost, not entirely but almost, it can be said that whatever your interests are, the MERCURY offers you in each issue something that is in direct line with them. The MERCURY for September is a good illustration of that. You will find it on the newsstands today.

THE AMERICAN MERCURY

An opinion about opinions

In this opinionated land of ours, there are many magazines of opinion. Which is all to the good. But some opinion is just talk—and other opinion is the kind that makes things happen. That is the only kind that interests the AMERICAN MERCURY.

Dorothy Thompson's piece in the September issue is a perfect case in point. She is not just reporting, she is not writing just pure fact, she is writing opinion. And it is such informed, documented and dynamic opinion that it is bound to start argument, rebuttal, wide discussion in editorial columns, in radio debates, in the government itself. THAT is opinion that makes things happen.

Major Seversky, with his MERCURY articles on "Victory Through Air Power," also was writing opinion that makes things happen. Dozens of other great public issues first saw the light of day in the pages of the MERCURY and dozens of others will, in the months and years to come.

It is no fluke, no lucky accident that it is so. For the MERCURY believes that one of the best products of a free press is the article of ideas—the opinion that makes things happen. And authors—as well as readers—know that.

3 Young Soldier Heroes at Walter Reed Say Fighting for U. S. Was Worth It All

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Pvts. Alec Mylncovich, 25, of Windber, Pa., and Calvin G. Koontz, 21, American Ranger, of Charlottesville, Va.

MYLNCOVICH

Sergt. Arby Barnes, 27, of Wauson, Ohio.

Just three young soldiers out of hundreds who lay quietly on Walter Reed beds, recalling their experiences, savoring memories and coming to their own conclusions about their times, their places and what they were fighting for. Two of these men took part in the battle for Sicily.

And they are not heroes. Not in their way of thinking. What is said about them here is told briefly for each of them.

Tell the folks, Pvt. Koontz. All you did was become a Ranger and like so many others, found yourself staring out across a short stretch of water that combs a foreign shore Guns are booming on that shore and men are racing toward them, as invasion barges grate on the beach and more men leap into the water to join the others.

Hit By Grenade

It is nearly your turn now. This is it, allright.

It is later, of course, that they tell you that what hit you was the full force of a grenade explosion set off. "God knows how," an explosion that downed 20 of your pals.

BARNES

You never did see action, but you've lost an eye and your legs are dismayingly burn scarred and you are with a Purple Heart, like the others, in Walter Reed.

What about it, Calvin?

"This about it, mister. If I had gotten ashore I think I would have made a good soldier, but," the one good eye of Pvt. Calvin Koontz waters a little, "I didn't make it. That was the hard part of it. I had the training and the willingness and out there was what I'd come for. Or," he smiled wryly, "was it? You see . . ."

See what, Calvin?

"Well, I guess I'm young and all that, but somehow, like this Sergeant Overdahl you wrote about, I could see how necessary this was. We may not have everything the way we want in our country, but what's here is big and there is freedom. I sort of wanted to go and come back knowing I'd done something to keep what we have here . . . Oh, hell . . ."

Mylncovich Speaking

"Now listen, you aint going to make a hero out of me." Alec Mylncovich, steel worker, glares up at us. Once Private Mylncovich had a hole in his back, behind the heart. The hole is closed now, but once "hell, you could sink your fist in it."

"You talk about the First Division. Make it the hero of your piece, please."

Okay, Mylncovich. So what about the First Division?

The story is of the enraged, but coldly ruthless and efficient Tenth German Panzer Division, supported by Stukas and Messerschmitts unleashing fury to stem the steady American advance.

It's old stuff to them and to us, a story that opens with the attack on Oran last November and moves on through El Guettar, Mateur, Maknassy, Ouesseltia and Kasserine Pass. It ends, for Alec Mylncovich, March 23 this year. After 137 days of continuous battle he is hit in the back by fragments of shell thrown by a German heavy gun.

"Sure," Alec grins, "I took all them places. Me and the First Division."

So now.

"So now, like this guy," he points to young Calvin, "I'm back. I aint kidding. It's been hell, but when I look around, see what I see, I can't help think——"

What, Alec?

We Had It to Do

"The guy in the White House was right. We had it to do. We still got it to do. I hope we make this the last one. And we will because," he winds up determinedly, "We aren't kidding. We did fight for freedom and for security. For . . . well, everybody."

Sergeant Barnes.

All you did, after the ship you were unloading was hit by torpedoes near Gela, Sicily, the tenth of July, was to get yourself half burned to death helping trapped men out of the inferno in your underwater-line hatch.

"I see it the same way as the others, mister. You couldn't expect much more of me. You see, I was a member of a Port Battalion. It was our job to get ships unloaded fast and keep ammunition, food and equipment moving up to the invasion forces. Nothing heroic about that, just hard work.

"When the first torpedo hit, the flash set fire to bedding, mattresses and bags in the hatch. Some of the men were blown against the bulkheads. They were stunned and the flames were reaching them. I just dragged a couple out, that was all.

"Like I said. I see it the way these boys do, like Overdahl. No hooey to this war we're fighting. I didn't do anything, but, mister, I would've if I had the chance. I'm telling you," he breathed deeply, "even my little bit has made me realize that despite our differences in America, we are a swell people in a damn swell land."

Fellows, those Purple Hearts look good on you.

District OPA Says Few Wine Lists Submitted

Only a small percentage of the 200-odd hotels and other establishments that offer separate wine lists have submitted them to the District Office of Price Administration for price ceiling checks against prices charged from April 4 to 10, OPA said yesterday.

Sherwood Dodge, acting price executive for the local office, asserted that immediate steps will be taken to obtain the wine lists. He attributed the laxity in submitting them to a misunderstanding among proprietors concerning the regulations.

Wine lists must be filed, it was emphasized, because meal and drink prices were frozen at the April 4-10 level.

Woman in 'Poverty' Leaves $50,000 Estate

Omaha, Aug. 26 (AP).—Authorities opening a safety deposit box belonging to Miss Flora Bengele, 57, who died Tuesday under circumstances indicating she was poverty stricken, said today they discovered she had an estate valued at approximately $50,000.

Her body was found in her poorly furnished apartment. Kerosene lamps were used for illumination. Her closest known relative is a 70-year-old aunt, Sophia Bengele of Loretta, Pa., attorneys said.

Stream Control Bill Proposed

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 26 (AP).—Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, told the Missouri River States Committee Conference today he intended to introduce soon a bill fixing upon the Army engineers the responsibility for handling flood water on the Nation's streams.

Clark said the handling of certainly privately owned dams was largely responsible for damage done by the first of the 1943 floods in the Lower Missouri River Valley.

Judge Spurns Spy Suspect's Proposal to Plead Guilty

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 26.—Roberto Lanas Vallecilla, 35, a foreign language translator for the Federal Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in Washington, was charged in a Federal Grand Jury indictment today with conspiracy to commit espionage for the German Reich.

Valecilla, a native of Colombia, said at his arraignment before Judge John C. Knox that he wanted to plead guilty to the charge, but the jurist refused to accept the plea.

Bruce Barton, advertising executive and former Congressman, headed the grand jury which handed up the indictment. The indictment stated the alleged conspiracy took place before the United States entered the war, making 20 years' imprisonment the maximum penalty upon conviction, Federal officials said.

Vallecilla has been employed by the Federal Government since February, 1942. The indictment charged that all alleged acts of espionage took place between September 1, 1940, and December 7, 1941, while Vallecilla was living in a New York hotel, and that the defendant entered into a conspiracy with German agents at Lisbon, Portugal, where he was a student.

U. S. Attorney John B. McNally informed the court that Vallecilla was questioned in Washington by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation two weeks ago, and at that time signed a statement indicating he had been paid more than $3000 by German agents.

Judge Knox expressed surprise a Government agency would hire Vallecilla without exhaustive investigation of his background, and asked: "Do they take anyone who comes along down there?"

Assistant U. S. Attorney John Sonnett told the court most of the information it was charged Vallecilla forwarded to German agents was obtained from public sources. Sonnett said that one communication to Portugal contained information on American airplane production and was written in secret ink.

Slightly Cooler Weather Today

Some relief is in prospect for heat-fretted Washingtonians as the Weather Bureau predicted "Not quite so warm" for today.

The highest temperature yesterday was 90 at 3:30 p. m., and the lowest 75, at 4 a. m. Humidity ranged from 80 at 8:30 a. m. to 48 at 2:30 p. m. Later in the afternoon it climbed back to the seventies.

Ex-Colonel Indicted for Conspiracy

By Joseph Paull
Post Staff Writer

Bribery of a lieutenant colonel with $5200 by the president of the American Manufacturing Co. of Texas, and conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with the manufacture of 77-mm. shells were charged yesterday by the District grand jury in indictments returned in District Court.

Indicted are:

William J. Gourlay, president of the company, on bribery and conspiracy charges.

The American Manufacturing Co, of Texas as a party to the conspiracy.

August J. Cayouette, court martialed lieutenant colonel, Office of the Chief of Ordnance, War Department, charged with conspiracy. Cayouette resided at 600 Cumberland ave., Chevy Chase, Md.

The bribes were said to have been given by the presentation of five checks by Gourley to Cayouette.

The indictments also charges that Cayouette underappraised and undervalued certain tools to minimize amount of rent to be paid by the company for the use of the tools in the manufacture of the shells.

Other Charges

Cayouette, according to the indictment, was influenced to recommend the company as an experienced manufacturer of armaments to his superiors, to arrange for the allocation of tools and for the enlargement of a contract from $175,000 to $275,000 in the purchase of tools by the company.

Cayouette was, before his court-martial, assigned to determine the kind and amount of machine tools to be purchased by the Government in the manufacture of ammunition and to transmit to officials of the Ordnance Department reports and recommendations on the purchases.

Cayouette, the Justice Department said, was convicted on April 15, 1943, by a Fort Myer court-martial on charges of conduct of a nature to bring discredit on the military service and of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. He was dismissed from service and sentenced to pay a $5000 fine and serve two years at hard labor.

The Texas company, it was said, has obtained several million dollars in Army contracts.

Two Investigations Of Lewis' Trip Are Believed On

The National OPA and ration officers in Richmond, Va., are believed to be making their own investigation to determine whether John L. Lewis violated the pleasure-driving ban on a recent trip to Illinois despite OPA official's statement that the case would be handled by the Alexandria War Price and Rationing Board.

Capt. James S. Douglas, chief clerk of the Alexandria War Price and Rationing Board, said yesterday that the Alexandria Board had received no word from Richmond and that therefore it could not take action of any kind. He indicated that the case would probably be handled by the National and Richmond offices because of the publicity it had received.

Lewis, whose offices as president of the UMWA are in Washington but whose residence is in Alexandria, made an automobile trip to Springfield, Ill., the first week in August. While there he spent several days with his mother. The UMWA considers the trip one of business since Lewis visited several mining towns where he stopped to talk with miners and their families about present conditions.

A Washington official of OPA said yesterday, "It is a local matter and will be handled locally. Of course we are keeping a watch on the progress of the investigation, but it will be handled no differently than any other case."

Ex-Post Man Finds New Georgia 'Hot'

LIEUT. JACK GERRITY

Second Lieut. John F. Gerrity, one of four Washington Post newsmen who left in May of 1942 to become Marine combat correspondents, was back in Washington last night, wearing his new officer bars and bearing a prized letter from Staff Sergt. Samuel Stavisky, another of the quartet, who has been seeing red-hot action on New Georgia.

Lieutenant Gerrity completed training as a combat correspondent but has since become commander of an artillery battery. He stopped off here on his way to a new assignment that will put him in the same outfit with Sergeant Stavisky, somewhere in the Southwest Pacific.

Sergeant Stavisky is a former assistant city editor of The Post. On August 12, when he wrote the letter, he was still a combat correspondent, and had just returned from the New Georgia front.

Realizes He's Tired

"Now that I'm back at a snugly safe rear base," Sergeant Stavisky wrote, "I realize how tired I really am. The New Georgia episode was tough in every facet of the word.

"Danger was constantly imminent, with the result that it lost its imminence. Strain became our normal mode of living. Our beds were foxholes; our clocks were bombers. We lived with the wounded and slept with the dead. We killed Japs, I who have cringed at the thought of crushing a spider, found joy in lining two Japs in the sights of my M-1. A few nights before I had helped carry in our casualties from a Jap bombing. Revenge was hot in my blood."

Separated Year Ago

Lieutenant Gerrity and Sergeant Stavisky were separated at San Francisco a year ago. Meanwhile, Lieutenant Gerrity has been training with artillery outfits at several Marine bases. His new assignment probably will bring him into action for the first time.

The other Post men who went to the Marines with Lieutenant Gerrity and Sergeant Stavisky are Second Lieut. Earl J. Wilson, and Sergt. Alfred Lewis, former police reporter, who has been variously reported in almost ery section of the globe.

28-Ct. Overcharge For Half of Ham Costs Dealer $250

Charged with selling half a ham at above the OPA price ceiling, Max Weiss, grocer of 1541 C st. se., was allowed yesterday to forfeit $250 in Municipal Court.

The District OPA recommended the forfeiture due to extenuating circumstances in the case. Weiss had posted $500 collateral and pleaded not guilty. The plea was withdrawn.

Three butchers last week were allowed to forfeit the same sum on a similar charge.

According to Attorney David Hornstein, Weiss was not present at the time of the transaction and the sale was made due to an error in interpreting the price regulation concerning the price of different cuts of ham. The hame was sold at $3.68 for 7½ pounds, 28 cents above the ceiling price. The customer was Mary Mastin of 313 16th st. se.

Rosenman Likely Postwar Plan Head

By the Associated Press

Justice Samuel I. Roseman of the New York Supreme Court may come to Washington as coordinator of planning for the postwar demobilization of war enonomy.

President Roosevelt is reported to be planning to create such a post to tie together the individual efforts of a dozen Federal agencies concerned with problems of the return to peacetime pursuits.

Friends of Rosenman disclosed that he might soon quit the bench to take a full-time job as a special assistant to Mr. Roosevelt.

Human Rights Basis of Peace, Taft Asserts

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Because the United States is "not engaged in a crusade for democracy," its citizens must consider seriously the basic principles of a lasting peace if they are to secure that, Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio told the American Bar Association today.

"We are not engaged in any crusade for democracy, or for the four freedoms, or the preservation of the British Empire," he said. "We seek a world in which the American people can work out the destiny of the Republic and solve the problems of human liberty and happiness without physical attack on the distortion of our multiple freedoms by war."

Taft oulined a seven-point plan as the basic preconditions for the steps to be taken before considering "the question of the use of power to enforce peace:"

Complete victory and consequent disarmament of the Axis which he said alone "should insure peace for many a year to come and it is two-thirds of the problem;" a strong national defense; abstention from the internal affairs of other nations; a renewed attempt "to prevent the occurrence of any war in the world by international action;" self-determination of nations; insistence upon free elections in all liberated territories; and revision of international law to supplant "the German doctrine that might makes right" with an affirmative statement of principles on which the nations may live at peace together.

Ex-Night Clerk Found Guilty In Vice Case

Jack Magrell, 56, former night clerk of the New York Hotel, 612 F st. nw., was found guilty in Municipal Court yesterday of operating a disorderly house. The jury deliberated less than 2 minutes.

Evidence was given by Policeman J. C. Bryant, that "apparently respectable" Government girls, some wearing identification badges, used the hotel as a place to have immoral relations with service men.

Two 'teen age girls testified that they had taken sailors to the hotel. One of them, barely 17 years old, said she had used the hotel on several occasions.

A register was put in evidence, showing that there were entries of a "Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Single and Mr. and Mrs. Bumble Bee of New York."

Magrell claimed that he knew of no improper acts at the hotel, but Assistant United States Attorney Ray L. Jenkins said the entries made while he was on duty proved knowledge.

Previously Samuel Ishkanian, former owner of the hotel, which is now under new management, had pleaded guilty. He is now out on $2000 bond pending an appeal based on a technicality.

Pastor to Urge Farm Employment In Spare Time

Back in Washington after a vacation spent on a Virginia farm, the Rev. Elmer A. Wilcher said yesterday that he will urge his congregation likewise to volunteer for sparetime farm work to ease the labor shortage and save the crops.

The pastor of the North Carlina Avenue Methodist Church, just as in the first World War, spent most of his vacation close to the soil, this time in a cannery project in the Timberville section of the Shenandoah Valley near New Market, Va.

The labor part of the project is under the Department of Agriculture, the Rev. Mr. Wilcher having volunteered with a number of other Washington people. He received 30 cents an hour for his work, which included sowing commercial fertilizer, dusting tomato plants to prevent blight and hoeing the tomato rows. More than 1000 acres of tomatoes are under cultivation there, he said, and already two million cans have been packed.

War Sidelights

New Device Records Air Observations

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP). Like a busy office executive, U. S. Air Force men on scouting trips over enemy territory now can dictate their observations instead of using the customary pad and pencil. The words of the fliers, spoken into a microphone, are caught by a new type of wire sound recorder, which engineers of the General Electric Co. are redesigning so it can be manufactured in mass production.

Sixty-six minutes of continuous speech can be recorded on 11,500 feet of hair-like steel wire on a spool no longer than a doughnut. The recorder is contained in a small box weighing 9 pounds. When there is no longer any use for the recording, the speech can be "wiped off" magnetically and the wire used again.

Red Cross Seeks Data

London, Aug. 26 (AP).—Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, began a series of conferences today with Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of U. S. forces in the European theater, and other military leaders regarding the program of the Red Cross in the event of an invasion of the European continent from Britain.

Mother of Hero To Christen Ship Named for Him

Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall, 1707 Holly st. nw., will witness the completion of a memorial to her hero son, Lieut Comdr. Thomas Worth Marshall, jr., Sunday.

MARSHALL

At that time as sponsor, she will christen the destroyer USS Marshall at the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Kearney, N. J.

Lieutenant Commander Marshall was killed in action February 28, 1942, when the ship on which he was serving was torpedoed by an enemy submarine off Cape May, N. J.

A native Washingtonian, Lieutenant Marshall graduated from the Naval Academy in 1930.

In 1939 he was made executive officer of the USS Jacob Jones, the ship on which he was serving at the time of his death.

Commander Marshall had been awarded the Yangtze Service Medal in 1932 and later the American Defense Service Medal, Fleet Clasp. He was given the Purple Heart posthumously last May.

The Marshalls have two other sons in the service.

Savoy Rites Today; State Department Employe 64 Years

Funeral services for Edward Augustine Savoy, 88, retired chief messenger to the Secretary of State and an employe of the State Department for 64 years, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the McGuire funeral home, 1820 9th st. nw. "Eddie" Savoy died Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Edith Savoy Morgan, 503 24th st. ne.

Entering the State Department in 1869, when Grant was President, and Hamilton Fish, father of the present Representative, was Secretary of State, "Eddie" served under 22 Secretaries before his retirement in 1933. His stint at the department encompassed the administration of 14 Presidents. He could have retired in 1925, but Secretary Kellogg waived the retirement, and in 1931 when he was retired, Secretary Stimson retained him as a personal employe.

Besides Mrs. Morgan, he is survived by two sons, Alfred Kiger Savoy, an assistant superintendent of public schools, and Dr. Sevellon Davis Savoy, local dentist; five grandchildren, two of whom are commissioned officers in the Army, and one great-grandchild.

Adm. English's Widow Wins $11,000 in Suit

The widow of Rear Admiral Robert H. English, late commander of the Pacific Fleet Submarine Force, received $11,000 damages in a consent decree in District Court yesterday against Pan-American Airways, Inc., in connection with the airplane crash last January 21 in which 19 persons were killed.

Mrs. Eloise Walker English, 4445 Lowell st. nw., charged that it was "by reason of the negligence of the defendant that the plane was caused to crash near Ukiah, Calif., and Robert H. English was killed." The plane was returning from Honolulu.

Mrs. English filed the suit in behalf of herself, her two daughters, Eloise Walker English, 23, and Elenor C. English, 18, and her son, Robert Henry English, jr.

Pan-American denied in its answer to the suit that it had any negligence and denied that the airplane, was in any way defective during the trip. It was contended that the accident was caused by climatic conditions and that Admiral English assumed the risk when he traveled in the plane.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire signed the consent judgment order.

Officials of the airline could not be reached for comment, but the Civil Aeronautics Board reported that responsibility for the crash was blamed on the pilot of the airplane.

Work or Fight Law Jails Md. Youth constituting an admission of guilt, brought the sentence. No record of testimony was available last night, but both judge and prosecutor indicated no complaining witness was present and that the legal procedure was of the most informal nature.

Noyes said Day could have asked to have a doctor subpenaed to testify as to his condition, showing a complete lack of faith in the competence of the Army medicos who rejected him.

Arrested with Day was R. A. Grimes, an overage man, nearing 40. Grimes was also handed the same sentence but paid his fine of $50, whereupon he was immediately held on another charge, that of disorderly conduct, Judge De Lashmutt said.

At the time of the law's passage Maryland legislators were bitter in their denunciation of men who refuse to work while servicemen are fighting on the various fronts.

Whether or not it was the intent of the Legislature to enact a law that would cause a man to be arrested and jailed if he happens not to be working and is not in the armed forces, without first determining his draft status, could not be learned last night.

One State's Attorney in Maryland was asked: "Suppose such defendants held 4-F Selective Service classification cards?" The answer was: "I do not believe there is a ruling on that and, anyway, the law was passed in the spring and hasn't been printed as yet, so I don't have a copy."

Refuse to Call Fathers

Oklahoma City, Aug. 26 (AP).—J. B. Watson sai dtoday Local Draft Board No. 3 of which he is chairman, was refusing to call pre-Pearl Harbor fathers for induction "until this mess is straightened out."

"There's no use trying to fool anybody," Watson said. "This thing is a mess now. We haven't got any fathers prepared for drafting, and we're not going to draft any until this whole mess is straightened out."

Watson said the Army was rejecting too many of the men sent it.

French Painter Writes Story of Escape From the Nazis

Jean Helion, the 39-year-old French abstractionist painter and art lecturer, who is the husband of an American, and father of a former French sailor — yesterday told the story, not of art, not of his life, but of his experiences as a private in the French army, his captivity in Nazi prison camps, and his ingenious escape from the hands of the enemy.

HELION

To tell his story to the world, Helion, the painter, became an author and his book "They Shall Not Have Me" has just been published.

He has lived in this country most of the time since 1932. He went overseas in January, 1940, to join the French army. He was caught in the retreat of the Loire, when "disorganization, Fifth Column work and treasonous behavior by some officers made all fighting useless," and fell into German captivity.

The tale of his imprisonment and slave labor for the Nazis is a story well known: it is the story of the suffering millions of Europe.

Helion, though, was lucky. And his day of luck was Friday, February 13, 1942.

He escaped from his camp and through a display of practical wit and realistic thinking made his way from northeastern Germany to France and finally to America, where he arrived again in October 1942.

"All of France," he said yesterday, "wants but one thing: unity and power in the struggle against the invaders."

Jacques Helion, his 20-year-old son by a former marriage, also went to France from here to join the French navy and fled to Switzerland after the partial sinking of the French fleet at Toulon.

Helion lives with his wife and 4-year-old boy at Rockbridge Baths, Va.

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey —and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

● This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands —and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¾ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream — to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

Jett, D. C. Man, Killed in Action

Pvt. First Class William M. Jett, 22, of 220 34th st. ne., has been killed in action in the Southwest Pacific, the War Department announced yesterday.

A native of Baltimore, Md., he was a graduate of Baltimore City College. At the time of his enlistment last April, he was a student at Maryland State Teachers' College, where he served as president of the freshman class, treasurer of the sophomore class and vice president of the Student Council.

He is survived by his father, William M. Jett, a brother, Lieut. James G. Jett, and a sister, Margaret Jett, of Washington.

Three Virginians and one man from Maryland were also included on the list of those killed in action. They are Pfc. Raymond R. Pierce of Leesburg, Va.; Staff Sergt. Gilbert F. Andrews of Blackstone, Va.; Pvt. Spitler H. Abell of Middleburg, Va.; and Pfc. William F. Shankle of Frederick, Md.

At the same time the War Department announced that Staff Sergt. Howard O. Ford of Upper Marlboro, Md., is missing in action in the Middle East area.

Oakes Changed Will After Spat With Suspect

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 26.—Her voice broken by sobs, Lady Eunice Oakes testified today that her slain husband, the multimillionaire Sir Harry Oakes, changed his will last February 16 because of anger against Alfred de Marigny, the son-in-law who is accused of murdering him.

While both De Marigny and his wife, Lady Oakes' eldest daughter Nancy, sat near her in the tiny magistrate's court room, the witness said she discovered that Nancy had become pregnant while she was recovering from a near-fatal illness of typhoid fever in Mexico, and required seven blood transfusions. At the same time, Lady Oakes continued, Nancy was suffering from a severe mouth disease which caused a serious infection, and had to undergo three operations.

"As a result the pregnancy had to be terminated," the witness said, taking a sip from a bottle of medicine handed her by a lawyer. "It was dangerous for her health and she just couldn't go through with it."

Lady Oakes said she told Sir Harry about the pregnancy.

"Relations among Harry, Alfred and myself were extremely strained, uncomfortable and unpleasant," she related, "because I had given Alfred instructions before leaving Mexico to take the best of care of Nancy."

She said Sir Harry later telephoned De Marigny and ordered him to leave the Oakes home.

"If you don't get out, I'll kick you out," she quoted Oakes.

The will has not been filed for probate, and the witness did not disclose how the bequests had been altered.

In her recital, Lady Oakes described how she and Sir Harry were shocked by Nancy's marriage to De Marigny two days after her eighteenth birthday, but decided to keep up a brave front.

"We were frightfully upset," she continued. "She was only a child and was still at school. We knew that De Marigny still was living with his former wife, or whatever one calls a divorced wife."

Nancy left her parents March 3 and went to Nassau to join De Marigny. On June 9, the witness related, she received a letter from Nancy in which the latter cut herself and De Marigny off from the Oakes family "until we received Alfred as a full member of the family and had confidence in him."

Asked whether De Marigny was accepted, she replied:

"Certainly not. I considered him completely irresponsible in the care of Nancy and I knew he was trying to ingratiate himself with Sir Sydney and trying to alienate Sydney from the family."

Sydney, Oakes' 16-year-old son, inherited his father's title.

Both red-haired Nancy and her 34-year-old husband sat close enough to hear every low-spoken word uttered by the tall witness who has aged in appearance since the bludgeoned and burned body of her husband was found July 8, in a bed at his seaside villa.

Nancy and her mother sobbed when they met by chance just before the preliminary hearing began, and Nancy cried softly once or twice during her mother's recital. Nancy has maintained her faith in De Marigny's innocence.

De Marigny sat solemnly in the prisoner's seat, once signaling encouragement to his wife.

With Lady Oakes' testimony, the prosecution climaxed its weeks-long presentation against De Marigny. After one more witness has appeared tomorrow, Magistrate F. E. Field will be asked to hold the prisoner for jury trial on a charge of murder.

Berlin in Panic As Raids Continue

the BBC said in reporting the exodus of a half million to Poland. The broadcast overseas declared the foreign ministry might move to Vienna, the ministry of education to Posen and the labor ministry to Krakow.

Other sections of the fugitive population was traveling to the Baltic States and Austria, the BBC stated. Many Germans were said to be entering Poland reluctantly fearing for their lives when victory by the United Nations free the Poles.

Nevertheless Berlin school children were reportedly sent to the Posen and Lodz areas of Poland with teachers.

Reports from neutral capitals declared Berlin "lives in real panic" and the damage has been catastrophic.

The RAF campaign is to keep Berlin residents in constant suspense by nuisance raids between heavy blows. With big bomber forces grounded, the Mosquitos sent the inhabitants of Hitler's stronghold scurrying to their shelters for more than half an hour in the middle of the night.

Pilots of the lightning-fast British light bombers said fires were still burning in the city from the RAF's 700-plane assault Monday night and that the Germans put up a full-scale antiaircraft barrage. One Mosquito was lost.

The RAF tactics not only kept the civilians in the city on edge but forced the Nazis to keep their tired antiaircraft gun crews at their posts hours on end.

raid had set off a switch that turned on all electric lights on the Templehof Airdrome in Berlin, the travelers reported. With this sunburst of light supplementing their flares, the RAF bombers were enabled to put the airport and the entire district around it out of commission within a few minutes.

Airport repair plants, communications centers, gas works, munitions and chemical plants, barracks and rail lines adjacent to Templehof were easily located by the raiders in the freak blaze of light. The entire surrounding district which extends to the Sportsplast and Wilhelmstrasse, was methodically laid waste by the bombers.

Tonight's arrivals in Sweden reported the southern and western part of the city particularly hard hit while Berlin's center was blasted with unerring precision.

Blocks around western Berlin's best-known buildings in the Gedaechtniskirche section were destroyed by explosives, arrivals at Malmoe reported. They said the incendiaries provide especially destructive in this area. This means the finest shopping district and the most popular entertainment district of Berlin apparently has already shared the lot of Hamburg.

BEAT THE HEAT
To help prevent heat rash (so called prickly heat) as well as soothe the sting of heat rash irritated skin, count on Mexsana, formerly Mexican Heat Powder. Just sprinkle Mexsana well over your burning, itching skin and feel how delightfully comforting it is as it takes the hot feeling out of these miseries. Mexsana is the type medicated powder often recommended by many specialists. Ideal for baby's diaper rash. And cools the burn of sunburned skin, too. Forms a medicated coat of protection against chafe. Costs little. And there's even greater savings in larger sizes. Always ask for Mexsana.

Small Plants Get Maritime Assurances

A major step toward greater placement of war contracts with small business men was effected yesterday in an announcement a new program of cooperation between the Maritime Commission and the Smaller War Plants Corp. has been developed.

The action made the commission the last of the three top war arms to swing in with the efforts and purposes of SWPC. The Army and Navy has already had working relationship developed with SWPC, even though this relationship is still spotty, according to informed officials.

The new program was announced at a time when SWPC, under Gen. Robert W. Johnson, is swinging into high gear to disprove criticisms within business, and Government that the agency has not been as effective as could be wished.

The new arrangements with the commission follow an announcement by Johnson two weeks ago that he has resigned his Army commission to devote all of his time to helping "the small man." Besides the war services, Johnson said he would also attempt to divert all possible manufacture of essential civilian goods to small plants.

Under arrangements with the commission, a small business section has been set up in each of the four regional commission construction offices.

At the same time, steps are being taken to establish similar units within each of the purchasing offices of private shipyards having contracts with the commission, the announcement stated.

In the joint statement with Johnson, Admiral Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission said recognition will be made of the fact the per unit cost to a small plant may be greater than the per unit cost to a large plant.

And thus, in order to mobilize the production capacity of all plants, it may be necessary to pay higher unit price to the small plant, said Land.

Lieut. Gen. Clark Given Merit Meal

Award of the Legion of Merit to Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark for services as deputy chief of staff at general headquarters and chief of staff of the Army ground forces before the invasion of North Africa was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Clark previously received the Distinguished Service Medal for his work in planning and organizing the North African operations. He now commands the U. S. Fifth Army there.

OCD Enrolls Forest Firemen

An army of volunteers has been enrolled by the Office of Civilian Defense to guard timberlands against fire hazards increased by the stress of wartime lumbering operations.

Already, 185,000 civilians have signed up for a fire fighting patrol that will total 250,000 when the fire-hazard season reaches its peak this fall, it was announced yesterday.

Water System

There can be no quarrel with Representative Hebert's conclusion that something is wrong with the District Water Department. As the Congressman says, the very fact that water bills of $120 are allowed to accumulate is "a clear evidence of negligence." Hundreds of families are unable to pay bills of that size on short notice. If the only remedy is to turn off their water, a health menace in this overcrowded city may easily arise.

Apparently most of these enormous water bills are indirectly related to the war. A large number of consumers paying flat rates were suddenly put on meter rates in 1940 in anticipation that meters would soon be installed. Partly because of the defense program and subsequent war, meters were not installed in many instances. At the suggestion of the Comptroller General the non-metered dwellings were returned to the flat rate, and are now having to pay the difference between that rate and the minimum meter rate over a period of two or three years. Such delay in making necessary changes seems particularly inexcusable, regardless of how seriously the department erred in providing meter rates for unmetered premises in the first place.

Fortunately, however, a thorough investigation of practices in the water registrar's office is now being made. Experts in utility management are included in the membership of the investigating committee, and the presence of Corporation Counsel Keech and Assessor Dent is assurance that its report will be no whitewash. Duplication of the work this committee is doing seems to be entirely unnecessary. Reresentative Hebert could probably render a much greater service by tackling the larger problem of reorganizing the entire Water Department. That two-headed system—one branch responsible to the District Commissioners and the other to the Army—is utterly out of keeping with efficient and economical operation of a public utility.

There are hopeful indications that Mr. Hebert may direct his inquiry chiefly at this anomaly. If he can bring the collecting as well as the distributing arm of the local water system under the District government, he will render a particularly useful service. For the system could then be set up as a unified public utility, charging rates that would not only cover the cost of its immediate services, but also would provide funds for needed improvements and steady growth.

WLB Stands Firm

Refusal of the WLB to approve the portal-to-portal pay provisions of the contract concluded between the United Mine Workers and the Illinois Coal Operators is another setback for John L. Lewis. Speaking for the board, Chairman Davis indicated that the $1.25 per day allowance for portal-to-portal pay was regarded as a "not very well hidden" wage increase. Since these wage increases could not be justified under the "Little Steel" formula, the WLB's course of action was clearly indicated. It could have done no less than it did without abandoning its fight against inflationary wage increases.

However, this decision does not leave Mr. Lewis comfortless. Even without portal-to-portal pay, the Illinois miners would be doing extremely well for themselves if the rest of the wage agreement were salvaged. For under that agreement they would receive time-and-a-half pay for all overtime in excess of 35 hours per week. For a working week of 48 hours, the basic wage scale under the Illinois agreement would amount to about $56 per week. Since Fuel Administrator Ickes has indicated an intention to order a 48-hour working week in some mines, the miners' chances of very substantial further additions to earnings appear to be excellent.

There is also a possibility that a certain amount of portal-to-portal pay may yet be obtained. A test case has been brought by a Virginia coal company under the Fair Labor Standards Act to determine whether portal-to-portal travel time constitutes working time that should be paid for. In the event of a court ruling favorable to the miners, another agreement calling for portal-to-portal pay might be negotiated and presented for approval to the WLB. Provided it represented a genuine settlement of claims based on adequate supporting data, the board has indicated that it would consider the proposal. With all the alternatives open to him, Mr. Lewis can well afford to bide his time and work peacefully to secure the maximum benefits obtainable under the liberal wage policies of the Administration.

Justifying The Record

In coming to terms with the French Committee of National Liberation the American and British governments had an opportunity of making a fresh start in the political reorganization of Europe. They have passed up that opportunity. The recognition they have given to the French Committee is no recognition at all. It is couched in such ungenerous and ungracious terms as to constitute an insult to France and an affront to our Allies. Clearly the act is of presidential origin. Mr. Roosevelt, even after the unification of the French factions had been announced, continued to act and speak as if the committee were as unrepresentative of France as a group of Hottentots. He said there is no France, that 95 per cent of Frenchmen are under the Nazi heel. This estimate of the French situation is underscored by the document which has now been handed to Algiers. The British have indorsed this estimate in a parallel statement which copies the meaningless jargon of the American statement. The parallelism testifies to the fact that the British feel they must keep a secure place on the American bandwagon, though they must be wondering where in the name of statesmanship the bandwagon is headed. They and our other Allies might well ask whether we know where we are going or whether the end is to be an attempted pax Americana.

The conditions under which the French Committee is accorded a meed of recognition fairly bristle. Algiers is warned to stay collective (a note of the Anglo-American suspicion of De Gaulle), and not to regard itself as a government of France or of the French Empire. Of course, the French Committee never asked for any such recognition. All that was requested was the recognition of the committee as the representative and trustee of French interests pending the liberation of metropolitan France. The two governments note this desire "with sympathy." But the only bone they throw to the committee is recognition of the committee "as administering those French overseas territories which acknowledge its authority," subject to the military requirements of the Allied commanders, subject also to fresh consideration whenever the occasion arises for diplomatic contact. What does this mean? It can mean only that we shall maintain our limited and restricted relations with the French Committee, as our currency policy used to be maintained, on a 24-hour basis, ad hoc. Algiers, in short, has no status except as a convenience.

So Algiers has become a pariah among the refugee governments. No regard at all is paid to the fact that the French Committee directly represents 45 million Frenchmen, without counting any confidence it may hold in metropolitan France as the interim trustee of France. No other refugee government could make such a claim. Yet we recognize these governments fully, and embrace them within the circle of the United Nations. No other refugee government, either, could make as much claim to representativeness of all interests in the mother country. The French Committee is as able as it is representative, and we can think, moreover, of no governing group in the United Nations which is so thoroughly wedded to the United Nations idea.

The only precedent for this no-recognition—this annulment of recognition—we can think of is our early relations with the League of Nations. The League used to be mentioned by name only when there was no avoiding it. In all references to it, there was a particularization of the body as located in "Geneva, Switzerland," as if it were a local council. Communications were received and ostentatiously not answered. It looks as if our relations with Algiers were going to be conducted with pretty much the same disdain and aloofness. If it suits our purposes, we shall have dealings with Algiers; if not, then Algiers will have to whistle even to be noticed. The act is a shocking refusal to face the stubborn and irreducible facts of the French situation. And why? Solely because those facts have crystallized in a way contrary to everything that our officialdom had prophesied. It is a tribute only to personal vanities, and the price that the Allied nations will have to pay, particularly in British-American relations with Russia, will be heavy indeed.

Turkey's Stand

Perhaps it is no more than a straw in the wind that a Turkish newspaper which has been consistently pro-Ally in its orientation should choose this moment to declare that Turkey does not intend to give the Allies armed aid during the war. Yet, since there has been no evidence to the contrary, it may very well be a reflection of the official Turkish view.

For some time there has been a great deal of wishful thinking on the subject of Turkey's future stand. When North Africa was cleared of Axis troops, when signs began to multiply that the Allies were planning to strike not at one but possibly at several points on the "soft under-belly" of the Axis, and when, as a result of Allied victories, the ferment in the Balkans began to increase, many began to assume that Turkey would join us in the war. It would certainly be helpful if she did. The Allies would then have a relatively short and easy route to Germany's all-important Danube lifeline and to bases from which to pulverize the oil refineries at Ploesti. But Turkey has thus far shown no disposition to grant the Allies these bases, let alone engage actively in war on the Axis.

The fresh comment from Istanbul now seems to spike all such hopes. Indeed, there is a distinct frigidity in it. The paper is Tan, and it states baldly "the war is not Turkey's war. It is a great war between great powers for world domination." Turkey, says this newspaper, has no grievances nor desires for expansion, and "for these reasons the Allies should not await armed aid from us." Should that prove to be the official attitude, a drastic change with regard to lend-lease supplies we have been sending to Turkey would seem to be definitely in order.

Wildcat Strike

The CIO workers who went out on strike Tuesday at the Brewster Aeronautical plant gave a lot of ammunition to those people who want to "crack down" on labor. The immediate cause of their strike was shockingly trivial. It involved nothing more than the assignment to duty of four guards, members of the Coast Guard temporary reserve, in disregard of their seniority prerogatives. The assignment was ordered by the Coast Guard, not by the Brewster management. Yet the local union leaders called all the men off their jobs at the Johnsville plant of the company and have threatened to do the same at the Brewster plants in Newark and Long Island City.

All that needs to be said about this situation has been said forcefully and well by the War Labor Board. "It is not asking too much in time of war," said the board in a telegram to local union officials, "for labor on the home front to forgo strike action even in the face of provocation in order to guarantee continuous production needed for the support of our armed forces. You and the members of your union have no right to place your alleged labor grievances above the needs and welfare of our armed forces and the people of this country, especially in view of the fact that the orderly procedures of the WLB have been provided you for a hearing of your grievances on their merits."

Quite properly, the WLB declared that if the strikers do not return to work at once it will invoke all the sanctions within its authority. Thanks to the Connally-Smith law, and a recent executive decree by the President, these sanctions are now rather potent. The board can impound the union's dues, collected under the check-off system, and can also procure cancellation of deferments granted to striking workers. There is no doubt that it must act with swift severity to overcome this defiance of its authority.

The Brewster strike appears to be a clear instance of local irresponsibility. The action was instigated by hotheaded leaders at the Johnsville plant, supported by the rank and file, but unauthorized by the national leadership of the United Automobile Workers (CIO). No doubt the proximate cause was but the last in a long chain of grievances. Generally the real reasons behind a strike are a good deal more complex than the stated causes. And it is well known that the Brewster company has had a long record of bad labor relations.

But the real or fancied grievances of these workers, no matter how acute, afford no excuse for interrupting vital production in the midst of war. The War Labor Board exists for the precise purpose of remedying such grievances, when they are legitimate, without recourse to the strike weapon. If workers themselves do not respect the board's authority, then its usefulness to them will be destroyed. Maintenance of its prestige is essential to their interests, for the sole alternative is rigid and repressive labor legislation. Fortunately a great majority of the American labor movement recognizes this fact and adheres faithfully to its no-strike pledge. It would be tragic if it were made to suffer for the irresponsibility of a small minority.

Ideal Appointment

In the joint communique issued by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at Quebec, Tuesday, it was stated that "the military discussions of the Chiefs of Staff turned very largely upon the war against Japan and the bringing of effective aid to China." This has now been followed up by the creation of a separate Allied Southeast Asia Command and the appointment of Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten as its supreme commander.

This development will be greeted with enthusiasm. Since effective aid to China can be given only after Burma has been retaken, the creation of the Southeast Asia Command definitely foreshadows a campaign to retake Burma, reopen the Burma Road, and thus reestablish direct land and sea communications between China and her allies. Lord Louis Mountbatten is just about the ideal man to direct that job.

The coming struggle for Burma will involve a large-scale and thoroughly integrated land, sea and air effort of a kind unparalleled in any other theaters of war. Here is where Mountbatten's unique training and ramified experience will count. He has served with very real distinction as a naval officer, having had two warships shot from under him. A flier himself, he knows the importance of air power in modern war. And as Chief of Combined Operations (the Commandos) he has demonstrated great leadership in a field where coordination of all branches of the fighting services is of vital importance.

SMALL SONG

Loveliness lies upon water
Like light across wheat,
Tremulous, shaken with shadow,
Sunlit, starlit, and sweet.

Beauty has troubled the waters,
Woven the garment of land,
Lighted the paths of the heavens,
Taken the heart in her hand.

Setback For Lewis

By Mark Sullivan

53 Mines Returned

THE ADMINISTRATION, by two steps this week, carried its controversy with Mr. John L. Lewis into new territory. Both steps amount to increased assertion of authority by the Administration. By both steps, Mr. Lewis is set back, seriously.

Understanding each step requires some knowledge of what preceded. In June Mr. Lewis and the policy committee of his United Mine Workers, terminated a general strike in the coal mines. "Terminated" is not the right word. What they did was to grant a truce—they said the miners would go back to work until October 31. The truce contained other stipulations besides the fixed date. The truce said the miners would work provided the mines were operated, not by the private owners, but by the Government. In the language of the UMW statement, the miners' return to work was predicated "upon operation of the mines by the United States Government, and will automatically terminate if Government control is vacated prior to October 31."

WHETHER THE Administration—as distinct from Congress—would have defied Mr. Lewis on this point, whether it would have taken the chance of returning mines to their private owners, we can't know. What actually happened was that Congress took a hand. Congress, in late June, passing a general law about strikes, the Smith-Connally bill, inserted a provision having to do with Government operation and private ownership. Congress directed that whenever a property has been taken over by the Government on account of labor troubles, and whenever thereafter normal production has been reestablished, the Government must then, within 60 days, return the properties to the private owners.

Under this provision of law, the Administration this week, through Secretary of the Interior Ickes, returned 53 coal mines to their private owners (out of some 3000).

Upon that Mr. Lewis, by the truce he had imposed in June, should have called a strike "automatically" in the restored mines. But the same Smith-Connally law, enacted during the interval, had modified Mr. Lewis' power to call a strike automatically. By that law, a strike can still be called, but only through a prescribed procedure. Mr. Lewis is still free to initiate the machinery for bringing about a strike. He has as yet given no sign of doing so.

IF MR. LEWIS does nothing, he not only yields on the imperative point in his truce of last June—that the miners would work only under a status of Government operation. He yields also on a point of principle of which he has made much.

In the 53 mines now restored to private ownership, there is no contract between Mr. Lewis and the mine owners. And repeatedly Mr. Lewis has said that the miners would never work in a mine, for the private owners, without having a contract. As Mr. Lewis tersely put it, "No contract—no work." Virtuously and unctuously, Mr. Lewis said that for miners to enter a mine without having a contractual right to do so, would be trespass—and never will any miner commit trespass, nor Mr. Lewis condone one. In fact, this principle is the basis of the stipulation in the June truce—that the miners would only work under a status of Government operation.

(One pauses to reflect that this honorable determination of Mr. Lewis never to be a condoner of trespass is a worthy expression of respect for the rights of property—but comes oddly from a man who, as the head of CIO, conducted the sit-down strikes in the automobile factories in 1937. Apparently Mr. Lewis, in his frequent quotations from Shakespeare and other classic sources, has never quite grasped "consistency thou art a jewel.")

Mr. Lewis' miners are now working in 53 mines in private operation—without a contract. Worse still for Mr. Lewis, the second step taken by the Administration against him this week, deprives him of a contract he had actually made. It was with some Illinois mine owners. The contract had to be passed upon by the War Labor Board. The board refused to approve the contract, because it gave Mr. Lewis' miners "portal-to-portal" pay. The board said that portal-to-portal pay is in this case a hidden wage increase—hence violates the board's rule against wage increases above the level of January 1, 1941.

Altogether, Mr. Lewis must be pretty cross.

Litvinoff's Recall

The appointment of Litvinoff as Ambassador to Washington should be seen, perhaps, as evidence of the USSR's determination to wage coalition warfare, a new course after the disastrous collective action suffered in the prewar years. His dismissal should, perhaps, be regarded as proof that the USSR now regards this as impossible, and considers only a separate war as possible. COMMON SENSE.

AMGOT

By Paul Schubert

Transition Step No. 1

IT WAS a bad day for the Sicilians when the island became a theater of military operations. Remote as we are from the war, it is almost impossible for us to realize what it is like to have the military march into a town or village and prepare to defend the place against enemy attack. With troops billeted in the houses, guns mounted at every conceivable strong point, motorcycles and military cars spurting through the streets, a place of human habitation loses its own identity and becomes unreal and melodramatic—"the front," super life-size . . .

As the Sicilians knew the front, they had the unpleasant experience of being "defended" by Germans. German mentality being what it is, the stalwart defenders felt contempt for Sicily's men and regarded the younger women as Latin hotsy-totsies—not to be compared with nordic blondes as race-pure mothers, and blessed with an animation seldom found north of the Alps.

AIRPLANES CAME, bearing the barred star of the United States Army Air Force, and dropped bombs. Sicilian villages and towns added new scars to the age-old marks of war.

Then a day came when the cannon fire drew nearer. Battle was imminent. The defenders crouched in fox holes and trenches, manned their cannon, looked to their machine guns. The villagers crouched in cellars, hearts pounding with fear. Children wept, and their anguished sobs were not pleasant to listen to.

After the battle the stench of death was in the place. Dead Germans lay about in grotesque attitudes. Small boys stared at the bodies, and one venturesome youngster dared to climb upon a wrecked cannon.

A jeep appeared, alone.

The Americans arrived.

The villagers adopted a placating attitude toward the conquerors. No need to antagonize the newcomers, so obviously powerful—strong enough to beat the strong Germans. Italian soldiers were giving themselves up by the thousand to the mighty invaders. As for the Fascisti, those blabber-mouths who had prated about the glories of war and the invincibility of Rome, those crooks who had extorted taxes and graft and blood-money—the Fascisti had become the scorn of the Sicilians. As soon as opportunity offered, knives would be out, and many a Fascisti would learn the feeling of Sicilian revenge. Meantime there was hunger . . . and what a miracle, the invaders were giving away food!

SO WAR passed through conquered Sicily—dread, followed by battle, followed by the rule of the invaders.

The Allied organization charged with the military government of occupied territories, is known by the unfortunate nickname "AMGOT," which sounds rather like Hitler laying down the law in the name of the deity.

AMGOT, however, is less lordly in conception than its name implies. It is merely a military administrative machine for the application of impersonal and impartial government during the transition period of Allied occupation pending a final peace.

AMGOT is being given quite a build-up in our press, these days, as the bringer of sweetness, joy and an ideal order to the districts in which it is set up. We hear quite a bit, too, about the gratitude of the conquered Sicilians. What we hear fits in fairly well with earlier pronouncements about the need for the United Nations to "police" the world for a long period after the war.

AMGOT, however, is an institution that we should view with strict and detached reality.

It is no use our deceiving ourselves about the popularity of the military government of occupied territories. We are invaders. We are foreigners. We are represented by soldiers. Whatever the initial reaction of the local population in their gratitude at finding that we do not intend to loot, rape and butcher our way forward, they must in the long run resent our presence.

No outside power can govern Europe, except during a transition period until the reestablishment of peace. The outside power trying to continue government or policing after that, will bite off more than it can chew—this applies to Russia as well as to the United States and Britain, and has been proven through the centuries. The Czechs have proved it, and the Alsatians, and the Serbs, and many other Europeans. The will to be free lies in Europe's blood.

Our responsibility is not to govern Europe. It is our responsibility to free Europe. And after Europe is free, it is our responsibility to see that no adventurous minority arises, as Hitler and his gang rose following Mussolini and his gang, to dominate great states and threaten our peace. But that is something beyond AMGOT and beyond the present. AMGOT is merely part of winning the war.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

'Mother Tongue'

In the title of your editorial, "Wells of English," we notice you did not add "undefiled."

Whatever our ancestry, English is still the "mother tongue" of the great majority of us; but whatever its advantages and recent wider distribution, that should not make us blind to its shortcomings.

Rooted as it is in many older tongues, it has perpetuated too many of the faults of all of them. Though already more widespread than any "prefabricated language," it could be wonderfully improved in many ways, as by—

1. Ridding it of its atrocious spelling (due largely to Greek and French influence) and adopting a spelling purely phonetic, like the Spanish. This would purge it of myriads of silent letters and "phony" diphthongs and digraphs.

2. As a corollary, adding diacritical marks to aid pronunciation.

3. Decreasing the number of irregular verbs.

4. Adding "common gender" forms to personal pronouns.

Skilled philologists can suggest many other desirable changes; but all such changes should be in the direction of simplification, if we expect a world, already well sprinkled with our lingo, readily to adopt more of it than just "O. K." and "gimme." W. D. G.
Falls Church, Va., Aug. 18.

Mothers In The Home

I wish to take this opportunity to commend you for the strong editorial which appeared in your paper under date of August 21, 1943, entitled "Family Life."

As a patriotic American I feel there is great need for stability of family, now and always. Mothers who can remain at home taking care of their children are doing a patriotic duty just as much as the women who are doing war work in various positions, for the mothers who can be with their children today are keeping the home fires burning with faith and love and are training and building the generations of tomorrow.

Air Power

Saw your "Air Power" editorials in the Globe-Democrat. They are by far the best I have seen and you are telling the truth. Keep it up. M. D. GIBSON.
St. Louis, Aug. 19

Bovingdon Publicity

Friday's editorial on the Bovingdon case was another proof that you intend to keep this case before the public eye, and I think you deserve full support for your attitude, though you may have been somewhat too pessimistic as to the chances of getting Mr. Crowley to change his mind. Government workers are beginning to realize that if Bovingdon can be fired because of "bad publicity," so can they. As soon as that realization translates itself into action, which means making known their feelings to Mr. Crowley, there is a good chance that Mr. Crowley will reverse his original decision.

If I disagree with any part of your editorial, it is with your suggestion that the remedy is to be found in an impartial citizens' committee. We have had two committees already which were designed to keep Mr. Dies in check: one, the Kerr Committee, turned out to be as good an imitation of the Dies Committee as you can get (nobody could quite equal it), while the Interdepartmental Committee, set up by an executive order of the President many months ago, apparently has never functioned. There is only one way to rid our public life of this constant interference in the day-to-day work of our Government agencies, and that is through the voice of the American people in 1944, which will repudiate Mr. Dies, along with the rest of those whose only way to keep fit is by slinging mud and throwing monkey wrenches.

Churches Can Help

The present wave of juvenile and adult delinquency will ultimately result in the degeneration of three of the most necessary factors governing the conduct of our lives as individuals and as a Nation, namely, the educational, physical and spiritual factors. These factors of necessity must fuse together in the individual in order to produce a real and democratic Nation.

Now who is responsible for the presentation of these factors to the individual in a way which is interesting and beneficial to society as a whole? As I see the situation, the spiritual factor is the fundamental and basic floor from which all laws must rise. Therefore it is up to the churches with the Holy Bible as a text to make a more concentrated effort in sizing up the situation and apply a more direct and modern method of approach to the solution of the problem.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey At Quebec

Dear Ma:

Just a line from Quebec where I am a unoffishul observer. Everything is going all right even if Joe Stalin is beanballing the batters again. Most of the delegates to the Quebec huddle look in pretty good shape, although some have got conferencitis which is a condishun caused by rushing to and from too many conferences. I seen a couple of generals that must of lost 50 pounds from travel strain alone.

Churchill and Roosevelt look fine on account of they are iron men anyhow and a conference acts on them like a tonic. It lifts them up, improves their circulation, eliminates any acid condishun and is better for them than vitamin B tablets. If Mr. Churchill don't attend a conference every couple of months he gets depressed, and Mr. Roosevelt is not at his best unless attending or planning one.

These conferences is great things for a city and the Quebec Chamber of Commerce should get a big hand for getting this one. It has been a wonderful advertisement for the city, which is now as well known as Casablanca I gess. I hear over 200 cities has put in bids for the next conference.

Everybody who is anybody is here. Anthony Eden is still the best looking delegate and nobody is close enough to be second. Cordell Hull, one of our Secretaries of State, is present but does not seem to be espeshully hot. Henry Stimson is around. This is his Second World War and I gess he has been in more conferences than anybody present, man and boy. Frank Knox got in the other day. I have not seen no sign of Mrs. Roosevelt yet, but I wood not be serprised if she was here somewhere. One-Eyed Connolly arrived and tried to crash the gate. He tried to get in by saying he was Commissar Ivan Connollotoff, figuring anybody from Russia would be welcome. It almost worked. He wood of fooled everybody if he had kept his big mouth shut or just been hard to follow, but he gave direct answers to direct questions which proved he could not be no genuine Russian. So they thrun him out.

T. V. Soong is here representing China which is a good thing as it is about time China got to one of these big huddles. This means everybody is in except Stalin. Stalin may not of been here in person but he could not of caused no worry if he had been. His shadow was over the meeting at all times. If he did not run out of ambassadors he wood of recalled so many that he wood of busted up the whole conference.

Everybody here says recalling ambassadors from Washington and London is of no significance. Well, scenically Quebec is a ideal place for the meetings and the climate for it is perfect also. I am having a good time even if nobody has asked me for no suggestions yet.

* * * *

Well, I will close now. As soon as this is over I am going to do a detail helping harvest tomatoes in New Jersey. What good is a world made safe for democracy if it is short of ketchup, eh, ma?

All my love, OSCAR.

P. S.—I serpose you heard why them Japs beat it out of Kiska. They heard a rumor I was coming to the Alooshuns.

"A" Cards

There seems to be much confusion and uncertainty regarding the change in gasoline rationing for the A-card holders in the Eastern section, including the District of Columbia.

It is said that there is some resentment in the Middle Western States at the idea of cutting down their allowance in order to give the Eastern section a chance. They seem to forget that the only reason they had been favored was because of the lack of transportation to bring gasoline to the Eastern Seaboard. But now that the trouble has been eliminated, it has been rightly decided to increase the allowance for A-card holders at a date said to be about September 1. It is said that the ban against "pleasure" driving would be lifted. But this term "pleasure" driving is very ambiguous. There is a wide gap between real essential driving and so-called "pleasure" driving.

There are many A-card holders who, in order to be on the safe side, have hardly used their cars at all, although paying the necessary taxes, including use stamps, for purposes which, in their opinions, seem to be sufficiently important, and which in no case could be called "pleasure" driving. Could not such a privilege be afforded them without having to be classified as "pleasure" drivers?

War Labor Board

By Wesley McCune

Now Armed With Full Powers

FOR THE first time, the National War Labor Board is armed with a full set of legal powers as it goes to battle with defiant employes and employers. After a number of groping maneuvers, muddied in part by Secretary Ickes' jurisdictional claims over the coal case, the Administration has drawn a ring of sanctions around John L. Lewis, in particular, and striking workers, in general. It is of course possible that the board's teeth will not be sharp enough to stop some troublesome strikes, but board members finally say that they have all enforcement powers necessary. It was an open secret that members were ready to resign a few days before the President empowered them to take such actions as denying unions a check-off of dues and cancelling draft deferments of strikers. Their orders were not being enforced.

Practical sanctions against employers, in the form of the President's plant seizure powers, had existed all along and were merely given a statutory base by the Smith-Connally antistrike law. Moreover, forcing recalcitrant employers to accept WLB decisions affected only the matter of work stoppages—it had little to do with holding the anti-inflation line, except as open defiance by management punctured the board's prestige.

ON THE other hand, enforcement against unions went to the core of holding the line, because wage levels were the paramount issue. However, it was impossible in fairness to crack down on Lewis until the President armed his board with the means for cracking down on a half dozen employers who were refusing to sign maintenance of membership clauses or comply with other non-wage clauses in board orders.

If, as Lewis spokesman are currently saying, the mine leader is brewing no more strikes, the board has pulled through a crucial period. Unlike the OPA, where a pressure group (consumers) are demanding that ceilings be enforced, WLB is beset with the inflationary situation in which both employers and employes would like to have increases and must constantly restrain themselves. Yet WLB has held the line it set out to hold: the Little Steel formula. A 10 per cent increase in the cost of living since that line was drawn has created terrific pressure on board members, and a hole in the dike might easily have eroded into a flood.

Strike or no strike, the mine case is far from closed, and WLB members know it. The President's proposal to put mines on a 48-hour week is loaded with operational problems which seem large enough to vitiate it as a pacifier of Lewis through the device of over-time payments. Moreover, even though an extra six hours of time and a half pay may seem fat to outsiders and to consumers who would have to pay higher coal prices, United Mine Workers members would not be getting the basic wage increase which their leader set out to get for them.

LEWIS' LATEST approach to a pay increase suffered a sharp trimming only this week, when WLB turned down his proposed settlement of the knotty portal-to-portal pay question. Secretary Ickes' gradual return of the mines to their owners is another potential source of irritation, as one condition of Lewis' back-to-work declaration was Government custody of the mines.

As important as any part of WLB's retouched picture is a feeling in the atmosphere of the board that it is now ready to go. The same Lewis who upset its whole routine a few months ago now stands before it pleading issues. The first employer to be put on the carpet since the new sanctions, the Atlantic Basin Iron Works, was told bluntly that plant seizure would be its penalty for stubbornness. A dozen more noncompliers will be handled the same way, and board members know that the guns they have been waving are now loaded.

With his unpredictability, strength and smart strategy, Lewis has upset plans for many adversaries in his time, and only recently has WLB been able to abandon piecemeal answers to Lewis assaults and turn to a consistent strategy to bring him into line. However, by backing up its War Labor Board, the Administration has cemented a big block in its wall against inflation.

Ernest Lindley is on vacation. During his absence his column will be written by various members of the Washington Bureau of Newsweek.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 26.—Because the prohibition movement during the last war culminated in the adoption of the eighteenth amendment a year after the armistice, both wets and drys are carefully searching the public opinion horizon today for signs of a new dry wave in this war.

The indications at present, however, are that World War II will differ markedly from World War I in that respect. Judging by Institute surveys from coast to coast there has been no popular trend toward national prohibition during the 20 months of the war since Pearl Harbor.

In fact, a national dry law is supported by fewer voters today than when the war began.

Only approximately one-third of the Nation's voters with opinions on the subject favor a return to prohibition, while the other two-thirds are content to leave matters as they are now.

The country's attitude today, together with the trend since Pearl Harbor, is shown in the following survey results.

"If the question of national prohibition should come up again, would you vote wet, or dry?"

	Dry	Wet
Feb., 1942	36%	64%
Sept., 1942	38	62
Dec., 1942	36	64
Today	34	66

A total of only 8 per cent had no opinion in today's survey.

The decrease in dry sentiment is especially significant in view of the fact that today's survey vote does not embrace the views of the men serving in the armed forces. At the time of the last war, many soldiers bitterly criticized the dry forces for having allegedly put prohibition across in the absence of the young men.

Today, with the young men again absent, the civilian population shows no trend toward the dry viewpoint after nearly two years of war.

Although at least 34 of the 48 States have local prohibition laws affecting some part of the population, what the general public opposes is a national dry law similar to the eighteenth amendment.

Men vs. Women

If a new national law is ever adopted, the women of the country are likely to have more to do with reviving it than the men. All through the years since repeal the women have been far more in favor of returning to national prohibition than the men.

In the survey a year ago, for example, only 54 per cent of women voted wet, as compared to 70 per cent of the men. The vote by sexes today is as follows:

	Dry	Wet
Men	27%	73%
Women	41	59

The surveys have likewise found that rural and farm areas are a stronghold of dry sentiment, whereas large cities vote overwhelmingly wet. This is still the case today, as the following table shows:

	Dry	Wet
Farmers	51%	49%
Towns under 10,000	45	55
10,000-100,000	30	70
100,000 and over	19	81

Tabulation by age groups show the older people more ready to accept prohibition than the younger.

Ten-Year Trend

It is interesting to note that sentiment today for a national prohibition law is only slightly greater than the percentage of the dry vote throughout the country at the time prohibition was repealed.

In official referenda held during 1933 and 1934 on repeal, the total vote in those States where popular voting took place was 30 per cent dry, 70 per cent wet.

CHAPTER XXIII

Moscow Dateline

By Henry C. Cassidy

Willkie Stirs Up the Second Front

Moscow was a buyers' market in the autumn of 1942. The Soviets were selling the second front 1942, preferred. So when Wendell Willkie came as personal representative of President Roosevelt, seeking precisely second-front stock, locked doors flew open, frozen faces melted into smiles, and the Kremlin gave him the warmest welcome it had extended to a foreigner in many a moon.

HENRY C. CASSIDY

In contrast to Prime Minister Churchill's visit, Willkie's was one of back-slapping good fellowship and closed in complete accord. But Churchill was one who directed the destinies of one of Russia's great allies, while Willkie was only a leader of the opposition in the other.

Willkie's visit to Russia, in September, could have no immediate, specific effect on the conduct of the war, since he was not in a position to make any official decisions, but it formed a remarkable chapter in the history of that period. It showed the Soviet desire for understanding and friendship, and it opened a new period of public pressure on the Allies to create a second front.

On his second day in Moscow I was invited to dinner with Willkie. I obtained a clear impression that Willkie was in Moscow to get ammunition for a political battle, in case there should be any isolationist or fifth-columnist movement in America for peace before both Germany and Japan were completely defeated. He wanted the United States to stay in the war until the victorious end. He also wanted to promote support for a western European offensive, by killing any suspicion that Russia would lie down and leave us alone, once we were engaged with the Germans.

Stalin and Willkie got along famously. For one reason, they were of the same mind on the most important subject of the day—the second front. For another, although they spoke different languages, Russian and English, they talked them in the same way, frankly. Stalin liked Willkie personally, and Willkie admired Stalin.

They were together for two hours and fifteen minutes, a long time for a Kremlin talk. Molotov and an interpreter were present. Willkie handed a written message from President Roosevelt to Stalin, and received a verbal reply. They talked of Soviet and American industrial production, of Russian desire for more active Allied aid, of victory and a peace where each nation would live according to its likes. Willkie went away, sold on the need for a second front.

Warned Against Delay

He went immediately to the "first front." Stopping at the guesthouse only long enough for a hasty supper, he drove west that same night, under a pale Russian moon, to the Red army zone near Rzhev.

This trip was the routine one which the Soviets had long since organized. It gave Willkie a chance, however, to talk to some soldiers and peasants. It also gave him a second sleepless night, for after dusk he started the drive back to Moscow.

On his last day in Moscow, he came to a cocktail party, given by the correspondents in the Associated Press room at the Hotel Metropole, and handed out a statement, summing up his visit.

"I am now convinced we can best help Russia by establishing a real second front in Europe with Great Britain at the earliest possible moment our military leaders will approve," he said, "and perhaps some of them need some public prodding. Next summer might be too late."

That rather ominous statement reflected the Kremlin view. But before Willkie left, on his last night in Moscow, the most revealing light on the Soviet attitude was cast during his dinner at the Kremlin.

That dinner was the most intimate of any offered to an important visitor. Twenty-eight persons attended. At 8 p. m., they walked through the Supreme Soviet council chamber of the Great Palace, their steps echoing through the vast, empty hall, and entered the St. Alexander room.

Stalin placed Willkie on his right and Admiral Standley on his left, with an interpreter beside each of them. It started out as a merry meal. It became merrier in the course of 27 toasts. Stalin proposed a toast to his guest of honor, Willkie. Willkie replied with a toast to Stalin and Churchill. Molotov toasted Roosevelt. That took care of formalities. Then the fun began.

Stalin chided the interpreters for translating in dull, flat voices, without emotion. Willkie promptly toasted the interpreters, "the only ones who are working here tonight." Stalin drank to their health and remarked that, when they translated that toast, it was the first time they sounded as though they meant what they were saying.

Stalin Criticizes Planes

Joseph Barnes proposed a toast to foreign correspondents in Russia, and to Soviet journalists, to which Molotov replied nicely by drinking to Barnes as a correspondent who had been fair and just in Moscow. Gardner Cowles, Jr., who was also with Willkie's party, brought them to their feet with a roar to drink to the average Russian soldier. Then matters took a serious turn.

Comdr. Paul Phil, Willkie's naval aide, suggested a toast to air pilots, which was duly drunk. Stalin turned the conversation immediately to Red air force pilots who he said were fighting well, although they knew the Tomahawks they were flying were not so good as Airacobras, and the Hurricanes they were flying were not so good as Spitfires. His tone was severe. He carried it even farther, by asserting 152 Airacobras, which were to be delivered to Russia, had been intercepted en route and diverted to the British.

Willkie tried to liven the tone by remarking that Stalin certainly kept his "eye on the ball." That took explanation, through the interpreters, about golf and baseball, before Stalin got the point. Then he agreed, he did keep his eye on the ball.

But a serious charge had been made, even though presented casually. Clark Kerr, the only British guest, had to reply. He said he had long studied Stalin's character, even before coming to Russia from China, and he had admired him, especially for his bluntness. That quality, he said, called for bluntness in reply. The Soviet Union, Great Britain, and the United States were united in a common cause, he pointed out, and if any planes were diverted from Russia, it would only be to further the cause of all three. If such a thing had happened, he concluded, he was sure Stalin knew about it in advance and knew it was for the best. That was the final speech.

"Nothing the British ambassador has said will be taken amiss," Stalin said, and the guests adjourned to the throne room of St. Andrew where the fun was resumed.

Wearily, but happily, the guests wended their ways home in the early morning hours. Just before noon of September 27, Willkie flew off for Kuibyshev and Chungking.

Willkie Arouses Standley

There was a serious aftermath to the Willkie visit. He had come as President Roosevelt's representative, to study the Russian people and Red army, and to promote friendship between the Russian and American peoples. The way in which he carried out that mission provided some upsets for the American embassy.

During the reception at Spaso House, I had seen Admiral Standley, pounding a corner table until it bounced, delivering what seemed to be an old-fashioned lecture to Willkie. That evening, Willkie, who had been introduced to Molotov by Standley, went—without the ambassador—to see Stalin. That could only be interpreted by an ambassador as interference in his affairs and undermining of his position.

Fliers Seen Little Concerned Over Foe or War

By John Steinbeck
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A North African Post (Via London).—The interior of the huge plane looks like the inside of a barrel. Baggage and freight are piled high up forward and toward the rear. Along the sides under the round windows are the bucket seats which look like cafeteria trays, and are less comfortable. Further, some trickster has arranged a ridge along the back which strikes you in the middle of the back and makes it impossible to be comfortable in any position. The ridges between the trays also forbid lying down on several seats. The bucket seat will be remembered with rancor for a long time.

The men of the combat crew are in their places now and the belts are fastened. It is dusk and the rain is falling. The ship lumbers out on the runway and then races into the air. The four motors rumble and their bite is so deep that the ship rises into the cloud at a very steep angle. The cloud is so thick that you cannot see the wing tips. Then suddenly there is a flash of fire. The ship has cleared the clouds and the sun is shining over a cloud sea of gold. It is a slow-motioned sea of waves that do not move. We fly a little south of the setting sun. The inside of the ship is brilliantly lighted through the windows. It is hard to imagine that it was so cold and rainy below.

Dog Enjoys Flying

Now a gunner takes off his coat and out of it comes Snowball, a little white dog, half Chihuahua and half fox terrier. Snowball gallops from one end of the ship to the other in delight. He has over 600 hours in the air and apparently has loved every moment of it. When Snowball opens his mouth it means you are losing altitude. He clears his ears that way and his ears are more susceptible than human ears. You can always tell about changing altitude by watching Snowball.

The sun hangs a long time on the horizon; longer than usual. Perhaps this is because we are rushing westward at about 200 miles an hour. But gradually it sinks and the cloud sea goes gray and the stars are brilliant overhead. The interior of the plane is dark. She cannot show any lights.

On the floor the crew gathers to play blackjack, the hard way. One holds a flashlight over which a handkerchief has been tied so that only a faint glow falls on the cards. There is little conversation because the noise of the motors is too loud. The men play silently and without any great interest in the game. It is almost as though it were a duty expected of them. They are going to Africa to pick up their new ship, and they will go into combat then for the first time, but they rarely mention combat or bombing.

Contact With Foe Is Brief

Talking with the air crews one soon realizes how little contact or feeling the crews have about the enemy as personalities. The average brush with the enemy is about two seconds long. This is one engagement. That is how long you see him and fire at him and receive his fire, and you never see him as a person. Consequently the men seem to think of the enemy more as a natural force than as a man or men. It is a job against something like a storm or flood, but there seems to be little conception of the enemy as men.

These boys here speak of their coming combat as against something disembodied. They have little interest in the war. They haven't read the newspaper in days, nor do they miss it. They do not know where they are being sent. The orders will be awaiting them. Their job is to work with engines and guns and planes, and that satisfies them. They haven't time or inclination for anything else.

Night Yields Little Rest

It is not a restful night. Some one is moving about all night. The floor is very hard and cold. A man gets up and stands leaning against the baggage to rest himself. A few try to lie down on the bucket seats until the ridges force them back to the floor.

A brilliant moon has risen now and it is apparent that we have changed our course to the southward. Gradually the men settle down. Looking out of the window the wing of the ship is brilliant and the motors drop jets of little flame behind them.

With the first dawn we seem to be flying over ocean, and then as it grows brighter it is not ocean but desert, burned and desolate. Only when the sun begins to rise does the country change. First there are a few olive groves, and then more and more, until in the center of a huge olive grove there is a walled city with turrets and castellations. The plane wheels and runs back on the landing field. For this ancient Arab town is one of the largest flying fields our Army maintains. The ship taxis to a stop. The door opens and a blast of heat enters. This is also one of the hottest places in the world. At 8 in the morning it is breathless. The combat crew piles out. "If this is Africa, I don't like it already," the bomber pilot says. The iron hangars and the fighting ships look very strange under the walls of the ancient city.

Gulf of Mexico Sharks Ignore Parachuted Cadets

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 26 (AP).—Sharks in the Gulf of Mexico apparently care little for naval cadets who are forced to bail out of aircraft and ride the gulf's 12-foot swells.

The jellyfish like them, however, and tiny fish also nibble at luckless airmen parachuting into the rough waters.

Cadets Donald Curtis White of St. Paul, Minn., and William Zuendt of Bergenfield, N. J., spent 27 hours and 8 hours respectively riding the waves after parachuting from their plane when its motor "cut-out" on Friday August 20.

The men are attached to Corry Field air station. Neither man suffered physical injuries. White was stung in several places by a jellyfish.

Draft Evasions Are Far Below Those of 1917-18

Violations of the draft law are running far below those of the last war although about twice as many men have been drafted as were called in 1917-18.

From October, 1940, through June 30, 1943, there were 6116 convictions of violating the Selective Service Act, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge reported yesterday. In the first World War, about 10,000 draft evaders were prosecuted in the first year alone.

Most of the convictions have been for failure to register, failure to return questionnaires and failure to report for induction. Penalties range from fines and prison sentences of less than one month to imprisonment for five years. Probation was granted in 1317 cases.

Cary Grant Keeps Gal Waiting on Pier

By Angele de T. Gingras

"Mr. Lucky," starring Cary Grant and playing now at Keith's begins in perfect melodramatic style with the love-interest, Laraine Day, standing on the end of a New York pier.

She is waiting for a ship to come in. And on that ship is the man she loves. Cary Grant.

But unlike the usual melodrama there is no baby in her anguished arms and her clothes are not tattered as the fog comes in this strips from the sea and curls around the heavy wooden piles.

The gal is not financially forlorn. And she's not the kind of a gal who usually parades the wharves. She is dressed a la Park avenue, and the Park Avenue aroma about her is backed up by several walls of ancestors and a grandfather with a seat on the stock exchange.

Let us go back to see how this gal came to be standing weeping on the New York pier. She was doing war relief. Innocent and commendable as such work is, a gambler got in and threw a monkey wrench in the machinery. And I mean in the machinery. And I mean two kinds of machinery . . . the emotional machinery of the gal and the war relief machinery.

And while he was doing it the gal fell in love with him. How could she? Well, I ask you? Would you care what Cary Grant did for a living?

Cary, alias Boscopouos, alias Joe Adams is a tough guy. He ran away from home not at a respectable age of 13. The man picked up his clothes on the end of a stick and left home when he was nine. Nine.

Then he battered around the world with loaded dice and marked cards, and coins that have heads on both sides or tails on both sides.

At the age of an attractive 30 or so he lands in New York. He is the owner of a gambling ship and he needs 50 grand. He is looking for a sucker to pay expenses to get his gambling ship to South America. He finds that all the suckers he once knew have been drafted.

And at this point the comedy really begins to interweave with the melodrama. Cary knits for his 50 grand. He becomes involved with a horde of fluttering females. He switches checks. He goes into war relief. He lets a woman tie his necktie.

He even talks Australian jingle talk with Laraine Day. Which, by the way, I hope doesn't become a fad. It goes something like this: A dame is a "briny marlin" and when a man marries her she becomes his "storm and strife!"

And so the screen story piles suspense, comedy and melodrama on top of each other until Laraine Day is on the pier in the fog.

And does her love ever come to the pier? Does he ever meet her there in the fog to kiss away the sad taste of the sea from her lips? I ask you . . . does the railroad train ever run over the heroine on the railroad tracks?

And did the reviewer like the movie? She was just as anxious as you'll be for Cary to arrive on the pier. Maybe more.

Mr. Lucky? Definitely!

Cary Grant is "Mr. Lucky" at Keith's this week. His screen luck finds Loraine Day when he's looking around for a grubstake to take his boat to South America

HEDDA HOPPER

Author Gets the Gate

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 26.—David O. Selznick insists on getting the serious undercurrent of American life in wartime into the script of "Since You Went Away." He's right, of course. But putting the idea over to his writers hasn't been so easy, so he's disposed of the lot of them, including the author of the original best seller script, Margaret Buell Wilder, and for the next three weeks the midnight fleshpots will have to get along the best they can without David, because he'll be sweating his own brains on the story, . . . Meanwhile, her agent assures me that several studios are dickering for the services of Mrs. Wilder, Monty Woolley, on salary as of August 15, is stroking his golden beard on the beach at Montecito and tea-hounding with the dowagers at Selznick's expense. Others who fiddle while David burns are Shirley Temple, Jennifer Jones, Claudette Colbert, Joe Cotten and Robert Walker, Good thing D. O. S. announced he's to be his own director, or the deadwood pay roll would be even more waterlogged. So now he's betting he'll be under way by September 15. Sounds more and more "Gone-with-the-Windy!"

MONTY WOOLLEY

Danger—High Explosives

Dorothy Lamour is working herself up to the boiling point. Right now Dottie's up in Denver with her husband, Lieut. William Ross Howard 3d. Lamour wants to do the John Steinbeck story "Medals for Benny." Paramount pleads, "Just one more musical, please, darling!" And goes blissfully, ahead with plans for "Rainbow Island," another crooner-swooner. If I know my Dorothy, some of those studio executives are going to be dodging a barrage of sarongs fired at them by an angry star who has made 'em millions.

Don't Wake Me Up

The other evening I entered another world right here in Hollywood. It was a Russian party in full swing, given by Nina Koschetz, who used to give command performances for the late Czar, accompanied by Rachmaninoff. Then, in turn, Rachmaninoff taught Nina how to play the piano and make her own arrangements. There was a Russian quartet in full voice, with Nina leading and playing. Then those superb pianists, Pierre Lubashutz and Genia Nemenoff, gave us $1500 worth of their time and talent free. And to cap the climax, there was a beautiful 20-year-old miss, Marian Bell, whose voice and face match her name. She's a protege of the Bob Leonards. Put her name down in your memory book. You'll be hearing it often in years to come. There to enjoy it all was Emily Kimbrough, Edward Specter, manager of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra; Charles J. Rosenbloom, vice president and backer of the Pittsburgh Orchestra; the Charley Drakes, John Houseman, the Sheridan Gibneys, Geraldine Spreckles, Gregory Ratoff's parents, speaking better English than Greg—a general mixture of both Russian and English. And what food! I learned that Nina will play a lush part in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." And I'm hoping for your sakes she'll be allowed to sing a lullaby!

Aims to Please—and Does

Glenn Wheadon, who's done so many command performances for men overseas, is now branching out for himself, and he'll soon be writing for the Dinah Shore, Bob Hope and Bob Burns radio shows, while still helping with command performances. This week he had a request from an Indiana farm boy who's now in the South Pacific, wanting to hear the sound of a coopful of baby chicks, and I'll be darned if Ginger Rogers didn't bring some to the studio and they peeped for him. On the same show was Frank Sinatra and Ed (Duffy's Tavern) Gardner, who figured Sinatra needed a press agent and applied for the job. Next week, Glenn needs the bray of a jackass for another farm boy, and asked whom I'd suggest!

This Is the Army

Richard Pollard, late of Life magazine, is now somewhere in North Africa. Soon after he joined the Army he was turned down as private first class—and the day after became a lieutenant . . . Heather Angel and Capt. Robert Sinclair may be altar-bound any day now. It must be love. Sinclair saw Heather in her "Life Boat" make-up at Twentieth Century—smeared with oil from head to toes—and still wants to marry her . . . Lieut. Will Price, Maureen O'Hara's husband, is going to sit for his portrait for Linda Darnell. Linda says she'll put his name at the bottom so people will be sure who it is.

LEONARD LYONS

Ex-Bureaucrat Thinks

(Leonard Lyons is on vacation. His guest columnist today is former Price Administrator Leon Henderson.)

What Does an Ex-Bureaucrat Think About?

As a bureaucrat I was one of the worse kind, an ex-professor, academician (Iron Pants Johnson's designation), figger-fancier (Charlie Michaelson's), theorist, researcher, ivory-tower occupant, and the best no-trump player in the Press Club.

LEON HENDERSON

When I think now, it's already of the good old days. I remember first the fun I had. Already it's like reminiscing with my old Millville baseball team cronies—I can't remember ever losing a game or making more than one error. Nature is kind that way.

I almost missed the big fun. In 1938 I went to Johns Hopkins to get a crick out of my back. I had been with WPA as a consulting economist. I was all hired for a good-paying private job. Harry Hopkins was convalescing in Florida. So was I. He asked me if I could delay going to my new job long enough to work on arguments for resumption of the spending program.

A few weeks later the New Deal abandoned budget balancing and took up again the governmental employment of the unemployed. This work had led to TNEC, SEC, NDAC, SPAB, OPM, WPB, OES, and of course to OPACS and OPA. If I had not been in Florida, or if I had gone to my new work as scheduled, I am convinced that Hopkins and I would never have had the conversation which kept me in Government.

So this is another thing to blame on Harry. But to me it was a glorious opportunity to use every ounce of training, knowledge, experience and observation I could muster. And it was fun all the time, even when I was mad.

Once a weekly magazine devoted some articles to TNEC and the author made me out a perfect schemer who knew every minute where he was going and was taking helpless Senators, Congressmen and businessmen with him. My Uncle Harry, who loaned me precious savings from glass blowing to insure college expenses, read the articles and said, "Well, Leon, he didn't say you ever crooked anybody and he didn't say you were dumb." So I never replied to the articles.

I did take exception once to a story that in 1936 I was so low that I begged Charlie Michaelson for a $70-a-week job as economist with the Democratic National Committee. That made me mad. Charlie got hold of me one day and said "Leon, they tell me I've got to have an economist in this campaign. You see these buttons on my sleeve? They're ornamental, aren't they? You look like hell without them, don't you? But they don't button anything up, do they?

"That's how I feel about economists. If I have to have one, I want a guy who can golf, tell stories, drink, stay up nights, fish, and one who can't play bridge any better than I can. So you're it." I told Charlie "no." I was making $25 a day as a consulting economist for a Senate committee. (I never could get the Supreme Court to hire me as a consultant, but I bagged General Johnson, Harry Hopkins, and the Democratic Committee). Charlie accepted me gracefully, I must admit. The next day I got a letter from the President which left no room for refusal. So I went to work as Charlie had planned. But Charlie wouldn't put me on the payroll, and Norman Baxter finally got me on as a reporter for $65 a week. Do you wonder why I was mad at Time for their story that I begged for a job?

I remember the day the President sent my name to the Senate for SEC commissionership. As usual the boss didn't ask me. About 11 a. m. one day Rudolph Forster, bless his memory, called and asked "What State do you want to go down from?" "Down from where to what?" I answered. Rudolph replied, "The President is sending your name to the Senate at noon." So I told Rudolph that New Jersey was my home, and added "Rudolph, if it isn't impertinent of me, might I ask what my name is going down for?"

My mother was always suspicious, though. As one who favored first the Prohibition Party candidates, and next the Republicans, she said to John Fath, after I left OPA, "I always knew them Democrats would play a dirty trick on my Leon." I often wish she and Joe Gaffey could get together. Joe feels, I mean says, that I elected nine Republican Senators last fall.

I got so mad one day I cried. I was haled before an executive session of a House committee to explain why I had frozen fats and oil prices. I explained several times that after Pearl Harbor, Manila, and Singapore, we were threatened with inflationary prices. One farm bloc Congressman said, "Now, Mr. Henderson, let's forget Pearl Harbor, Manila, and Singapore, and get down to what you've done to the Carolina farmers I represent." Before I knew it, I was pounding the desk in front of him and saying "— — it, you may think you can live in a world in which there is no — — —." And then I walked back to my chair. An assistant was there, seeing my tears. I said, "If you ever tell anyone you saw me cry, I'll beat you. Where would we be in this country if it knew a Price Administrator was a cry-baby?"

I stuck around Jim Farley on election night, 1936. About 4 in the morning he said, "Leon, you and I are the only ones in the United States who know that Roosevelt carried every State but two." I said, "Jim, this is a pretty proud moment for you. If you could have what you wanted right now, what would it be?" Jim said, "I'd like to be alone in a locked room right in this hotel with Father Coughlin."

But above all I never forget that once I was a barefoot farmer boy in Millville, N. J., and that America is a land of opportunity, particularly if you are lucky, as I am.

Sinatra Hides in Garage From Teen-Age Girls

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Aug. 26.—Frank Sinatra, one-man president of all of America's high-school student bodies, made his entry into Hollywood this week.

But the crooner was nigh a goner ere he made 'er.

He left one shoe and his shirttail in the Pasadena Railroad Station.

Police had to lock him in a public garage to keep off the howling horde of 'een-age romanticists who threatened to dismember their beloved—and even then beat against the garage with all the vehemence of grandpappy pounding at the door of a locked Chic Sale on a winter night in Kansas.

Four hours passed before bruised and battered bluecoats deposited the bewildered ballad baritone behind the bastioned barricade of the RKO Radio studios—whence he had been summoned from the East to warble in his first big movie, Tim Wheland's production of the Broadway musical, "Higher and Higher."

Sinatra's Reception Tops 'Em All

Every other hail-the-conquering-hero entry made by a famous entertainment star during the past quarter of a century now seems, in retrospect, the ripple caused by a tossed pebble on the surface of a woodland pool.

Hark back to that dim day in the cinematic past when glorious Gloria Swanson returned to Hollywood with her blushing bridegroom, the Marquis de La Falaise. In an open car they rolled grandly to a stop before the old Paramount studios, along the front of which stretched great tubs of water filled with carnations. A roaring throng swept to the car, showering the couple with soaking blossoms. In nothing flat, Miss Swanson resembled a drowning Persian kitten going down for the last time.

But It Was Phoney!

What excitement! What a reception! But, alas, it was somewhat on the phonus balonus side. A sense of reportorial honesty forces your correspondent to reveal, though with sadness, that the Swanson reception was staged by the studio to soften Glorious Gloria into weakening on her new demand for a contract calling for $20,000 a week—and the "roaring throng" was composed to a large extent of studio employes!

In the case of Singer Sinatra, however, even the Santa Fe Railroad went to extremes to stop the pandemonium of his arrival. Their officials pleaded with RKO Radio officials not to let him leave their crack train at its Western terminus, the Union Station in Los Angeles. They simply couldn't have the huge station, so vital to military traffic, clogged with thousands of mad, milling enthusiastis.

So Frankie Sinatra had to leave the train at the Pasadena outpost. And there studio executives themselves were dumfounded when 25 photographers, including representatives of local dailies, news syndicates, Life, Look and the Fan magazines, showed up to welcome the singer. All newspapers, even from distant Long Beach and San Bernardino, also sent from one to three persons to write news and color stories; six radio commentators were on hand, not to mention the newsreel men.

This One Wasn't Faked

When Sinatra left the train, one photographer was knocked headlong from a stepladder in the wild jitterbug rush. Two others nosedived from a baggage truck. The reporters were helpless. At long last, a cordon of corpulent cops completely encircled Sinatra. It looked like the burly brutes were going to start playing "London Bridge is Falling Down" or "'Round the Mulberry Bush." Then, with a flying wedge of more corpulent cops in front, they rushed the sagging Sinatra across the street, into a huge public garage and slammed the doors shut. In that garage, newspapermen got their interviews, photogs, their pictures.

Sergt. William Tate, a veteran marine who has not set foot on American soil in more than four years, came home to Pasadena the day Sinatra arrived. He hitchhiked from San Pedro harbor, the last motorist dropping him near the station just as the Santa Fe Chief came to a stop. The Sinatra wave rolled over the rock-ribbed marine, slid him on the seat of his breeches into the gutter. Dazed and battered, he lurched to his feet, seeking information:

"Frankie Sinatra's here!" screamed a woman.

"And who the hell," screamed back Sergt. Bill Tate, "is Frankie Sinatra?"

Capital Transit Votes 50-Cent Disbursement

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of Capital Transit Co. yesterday declared a third-quarter dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, bringing total disbursements so far this year to $1.50 a share.

The stock, listed on the Washington Stock Exchange, currently is quoted at 30¼ bid and 30¾ asked.

The transit company board also directed at its regular meeting that $125,000 be set aside from the undistributed earnings of the third quarter to be added to the 'property adjustment reserve.' At the same time, the board set aside an additional $60,000 out of such earnings to be added to the 'reserve for postwar requirements.'

The latest dividend is payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 15. For 1942, the transit company paid a total of $1.75 a share to its common shareholders.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

B. & O. Nets $26,134,408

Net income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad totaled $26,134,408 for the first seven months this year, an increase of $10,243,559 over the corresponding period last year.

The company announced this figure was reached after deducting all charges, including accruals for Federal income and payroll taxes of $20,445,283, or $7,334,260 more than was reserved for these purposes in the same period last year.

The net income during July, after providing for all taxes, amortization of defense projects and fixed charges, including contingent interest, was $4,321,028, the company said. This represented an increase over July, 1942, of $989,-

Operating revenues for July were reported at $31,354,836, an increase over July, 1942, of $4,358,-542. Passenger revenue amounted to $3,759,599, a figure $1,239,132 above that of July of last year.

Coburn Heads Brown Co.

Frederic G. Coburn has been elected president of Brown Co. of New Hampshire, producers of pulps, paper and allied products, it was announced here yesterday. Mr. Coburn, a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, designed and managed the naval aircraft factory during the First World War. He served for many years as an officer in the Construction Corps of the Navy and has held executive posts with the Aviation Corp. and its subsidiary, American Airlines, Inc.

League to Map Bond Drive

A special meeting of members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League has been called for Thursday, September 2, at the Capitol Park Hotel to organize efforts to meet quotas for the third war loan drive. According to Edward C. Baltz, chairman of the building and loan group, the league was successful in meeting quotas on the second war loan drive in April and members are confident that they will go over the top during the forthcoming campaign.

F. Willson Camp, secretary of the league, pointed out yesterday that current resources of the 25 member associations are approximately 190 million dollars, while customer contacts, both investing and borrowing, are more than 155,000 people.

Nats Beat Browns, 9-7, Drop Second, 4-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—How a .246 hitter without any reputation for hitting home runs could move into a town and proceed to hit six homers in five days is the incredible story of Stan Spence of the Nats. Spence, himself, would like to have the explanation.

POVICH

"It would be worth about $20,000 a year more to me if I could master the trick," says the very practical Spence. "I'm using the same bat and the same swing and all of a sudden I find myself hitting home runs. It's wonderful, but I hope it's not temporary."

No one ball player ever dealt out as much punishment to any one club as Spence has been inflicting on the Browns this year. He's batting for a season's average of .569 against the St. Louis pitching, with 37 hits in 65 times at bat as of this afternoon. He was hitting only .243 when he came into St. Louis this week. The Browns think, and with justification, that he's the toughest guy in the league to pitch to.

There's something funny, somewhere, though. Spence never hit more than four home runs in any full season in the majors. This week, already, he has hit six against the Browns. But it's funnier than that, closer inspection shows. Spence has a total of 10 homers this year. Nine of them have been swatted against St. Louis pitching.

There have been cases before of ballplayers suddenly blossoming into long-distance hitters. Lou Finney, of the Red Sox, was a notable example. With the A's he was known as a "banjo-hitter," choking his bat and plunking hits over the infield. With the Red Sox, Finney changed his style, gripped his bat on the end, and began to hit for extra bases.

But Spence hasn't changed his batting style. It always has been a good one, incidentally. He's basically a wrist hitter, a picture batsman who gives the photographers their nicest pictures of a rhythmic swing. The wrist hitters don't go for that long ball. But when their timing is perfect they get it, nevertheless.

They can't attribute Spence's amazing output of home runs in St. Louis to the short distances in right field in the Browns' park. The fence is only 310 feet away down the right-field line, but the pavilion is 30 feet high and a home-run ball must go over the roof. Spence's homers here have been enormous drives that would have reached any of the fences in any of the parks.

Spence was one of the league's good hitters last year. In fact, he was the third leading hitter in the league with his .323 average. But he was regarded merely as a guy who met the ball well, a smart hitter who could slice the outside pitch into left field. This year he hasn't been feared much. He was still aiming to left field, but he wasn't getting his hits.

After he had hit four homers in three days in the Browns' park on this trip, Spence was the topic of conversation in the Nats' hotel where Buck Newsom also resides. "I'll stop him," said Newsom, "he'll get none of those low inside balls from me."

And so the next day when Newsom was pitching for the Browns, he threw Spence no low ball inside. He threw him a high ball outside, and Spence stepped into the pitch and pulled it on top of the right-field roof for a home run. How come? Well, seems like Spence had heard Newsom popping off in the lobby and was waiting for that outside pitch.

Later in the series Newsom was in there pitching for the Browns again in a relief role. He stopped Spence's home-run streak. He walked him.

Bucky Harris was the first man to detect signs of hitting ability in Spence. Despite the fact that he had hit only .231 with the Red Sox in 1941, Harris insisted on the inclusion of Spence in the deal that brought Pitcher Jack Wilson from Boston in exchange of Ken Chase and Johnny Welaj. "Spence always looked like better than a .231 hitter to me," said Harris at the tim . of the trade.

Like most ballplayers, Spence is finicky about his bats. When Dutch Leonard grabbed one of Spence's bats and started toward the plate the other day, the outfielder screamed. "Come back here with that stick," yelled Spence. He made Leonard pick another bat. Spence's reasoning was simple enough. He thinks there are only so many hits in each bat, and he wants every last one of them for himself.

Wynn Wins 15th Victory In Opener

Candini Loses Control and Walks Three Runs Over To Bow in Second

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—In the grip of a new and not very desirable habit, the Nats today divided another doubleheader with the seventh-place Browns, the third time that has happened this week. Today it happened on a very sour note.

The Nats had the first game won, 9 to 7, and were on the scent of a double victory when Milo Candini walked three men across the plate in the second inning of the second game. The Nats never got those runs back and took a 4-3 beating.

They were playing against both the Browns and the clock in that second game. With the game to be called at 5:10 p. m. to permit the Nats to catch a train, the teams got in only eight innings before time expired.

Spence Continues Spree

Stan Spence continued his home-run hitting spree in the first game, collecting his sixth circuit swat of the series to help Early Wynn to his fifteenth victory of the season. Wynn needed the help also, of Dutch Leonard, who came into the game with two out in the ninth at a time when the Brown had the tying run on base. Leonard closed out the game on three pitches.

Against left-handed Al Hollingsworth in the second game, the Nats took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but muffed a big inning. After Case singled and scored on Vernon's single and Powell's double, the Nats filled the bases with none out when Spence was hit by a pitched ball. But Gerry Priddy bounced a ball back at Hollingsworth who started a double play via home plate.

George McQuinn brought the Browns a 1-1 tie in the same inning with a home run atop the rightfield roof and Alex Kampouris hoisted one onto the same roof, the twenty-first homer of the eight-game series, to put the Nats in a 2-1 lead in the second inning.

But the game then got away from Candini. The Browns filled the bases on Stephens' single, Byrnes' infield hit and a walk to Christman with none out. Candini threatened to get out of the situation when he fanned Ferrell and Hollingsworth in succession, but he lost control again, walked Clary, Zarilla and McQuinn, and a run scored on each pass.

Mertz Blanked Browns

The Nats never could get all those runs back, although Jim Mertz tried to keep them in the ball game by shutting the Browns out after relieving Candini after the third force-in run. George Case put a run in motion in the fifth when he beat out a bunt and scampered to third on Clary's wild throw. Vernon scored him with a single to center.

The Nats put the tying run on base in the sixth when Priddy singled with one out, and in the seventh, Case singled with one out, but nothing productive was forthcoming.

The wild nature of that first game asserted itself in the first inning when a wild throw to first by Gerry Priddy with two out gave the Browns a 2-0 lead. The Browns gave those two runs right back to the Nats in the second inning when Don Gutteridge threw wild to first after Robertson had reached base on a pop-fly double and Early had singled.

The Nats stepped out into a 4-2 lead against Muncrief in the fourth when Robertson singled and scored on Priddy's long double to center, Wynn singled to center to score Priddy.

In the fifth, Stan Spence made it 5-2, personally with his sixth home run of the series, a blast completely over the right-field roof with two strikes against him. In the sixth, Myatt, Wynn and Case singled to make it 6-2.

McQuinn's Homer Cuts Lead

The Browns took a two-run chunk out of that lead when McQuinn banged a homer onto the right field pavilion with Zarilla on base. And Wynn's lead dwindled to 6-5 in the eighth when Hayes hit the game's third homer into the left field seats.

Then the Nats took a grip on themselves. With Newsom pitching in the eighth, Priddy led off with a double to left, went to third on a bunt and scored on a passed ball.

Against Newsom in the ninth, Jake Early staked the Nats to two more runs and a 9-5 lead. He did it with a homer onto the right field roof top with two out, after Spence had walked.

It was just as well that Early hit that homer, because the Browns got tough in the ninth and put the tying runs on base. Two runs scored doubles by Byrnes, Christman and Gutteridge, wrapped around a base on balls, and Wynn was in trouble when Dutch Leonard strode in to pitch to Zarilla and get the ball game over with a pop fly to Moore.

No More Athletics

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Fordham University, which dropped football for the duration some time ago, announced today its withdrawal of all intercollegiate athletic competition until the war ends.

An All-Star Lineup From Baseball's Hall of Fame

A sum of 800 million dollars in War Bonds was realized yesterday at the Polo Grounds as a picked team from the Yanks, Dodgers and Giants met New Cumberland, Pa., Army Camp nine, but the feature of the day was the appearance of these old-time, all-time greats of the diamond who took their positions when Walter Johnson pitched again to Babe Ruth. Remember them? From left to right they are: Frankie Frisch, of the Giants; George Sisler, of the Browns; Eddie Collins, of the Athletics, Connie Mack, present manager of the A's; Honus Wagner, of the Pirates; Walter Johnson of the Washington Nats, and Roger Bresnahan, of the Giants. What a team they would have made in their primes. (Story Col. 1)

Indian Errors Help Red Sox Win, 4 to 1

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 26.—Cleveland's Indians got four-hit pitching from Mike Naymick and Pete Center today but the Boston Red Sox triumphed, 4 to 1, on their timely blows and four Tribal bobbels. The defeat allowed the idle Chicago White Sox to move into a third-place tie with the Indians.

Jim Tabor's fourth-inning single after the Sox had loaded the bases on an error, a single and walk accounted for two runs and a long fly produced the third marker of the inning.

'Punchy' From Pelting

'Skins, Licking 27-7 Wound, Head for College Park Camp

Five Players Leave Squad for Service; Local Eleven May Claim Eldon Wekheiser

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Enroute to Washington, Aug. 26.—Slightly punchy at the mention of the word All-Stars, but otherwise inclined to shake off Wednesday night's 27-7 defeat as early season stuff, the Redskins left Chicago today for their next headquarters at College Park, Md.

Beaten 28-16 by the College All-Stars in 1938, 27-7 on Wednesday and 17-14 by the Pro All-Stars last December, the Redskins were ready to swear off such contests for the more familiar surroundings of the National Football League.

Five players left the Redskins today, Sergt. Steve Bagarus, Sal Mena, Roman Bentz, Walter Haloupek and Don Nolander, Bagarus to return to his West Coast Army base and the others to their home from where they will enter the services. Although the Redskins had call on three members of the All-Star squad, Don Ziembra, Jim Youel and Eldon Wekheiser, it was believed they would claim only Wekheiser, leaving the squad one short of the player list of 28.

Takes Defeat Hard

Head Coach Dutch Bergman, who took the defeat a little harder than anyone else as it marked his debut in pro football, was faced with the realization the Redskins have lots to accomplish in three exhibitions with the Chicago Bears, Cardinals and Green Bay Packers before the season opens on October 3.

The 'Skins must develop a more consistent running attack and Bergman may be forced to find relief for Sammy Baugh among the rookies with reputations as college passers.

Sammy completed 22 of 41 passes for 273 yards in defeat against the All-Stars but he was in pain in the latter stages of the game and he was not throwing many long passes. He reached the point where on the last play of the game he was forced to throw the ball with both hands in the manner of a basketball player shooting a foul. His back may take lots of time in getting to the stage where it will allow Baugh normal movement on his passes.

Farkas only carried the ball once as he is still green on Bergman's 70-odd plays. Bob Seymour picked up what yardage the Redskins did make on the ground.

Farman, Wilkin Standouts

There was no complaint with the Redskin line with Dick Farman and Willie Wilkin again standouts. The ends played acceptable ball but the 'Skins may have to find additional strength at center.

The Redskins could certainly use a few of those stellar backs which the All-Stars produced, with about eight of them of equal ability. More in the manner of explanations than alibis, it was pointed out the Redskins had insufficient scrimmages before the game, and showed it; they did not have the Stars' manpower, lacked deception in attack, due to Farkas' late signing and Baugh's lame back and the fact they did not get a single break.

Mumps Hit Nats

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—Third Baseman Harlond Clift today joined Outfielder Bob Johnson on the sick list of the Nats and both players were left in St. Louis under the care of physicians when the Washington team entrained for home tonight.

Clift was stricken with an attack of mumps this morning and the Nats will be deprived of his services more than a week. He is at his home which he maintained here before he was traded to the Nats a week ago. Clift's two small children had recently recovered from the same illness.

Johnson late last night was removed to Jewish Hospital where his illness is diagnosed as a throat infection, responsible for the 103-degree fever which he registered this morning. Mike Martin, Nats' trainer, reported that Johnson would rejoin the team "in a few days."

Ray Robinson Favored Over Armstrong

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 26.—Corpl. Ray Robinson, welterweight star who was grabbed by the Army when within reaching distance of the title is a 3 to 1 favorite to thrash former triple champion Henry Armstrong when the two meet in a Madison Square Garden 10-round main event tomorrow night.

Armstrong is on the light end of the odds because of his age. The youthful Robinson won 42 of 43 professional contests before joining the Army.

'Skins Trade Zimmerman To Eagles

Washington Gets Haydn, Center, and Smith, Tall End, in Philadelphia Deal

By a Staff Correspondent

Chicago, Aug. 26.—The Washington Redskins announced today at train time that Roy Zimmerman, halfback from San Jose State, playing his fourth year with the Redskins, had been traded to the Philadelphia Eagles for two players.

In return for Zimmerman, passing, kicking, signal-calling understudy to Sammy Baugh who has never justified his promises, the Redskins will get Ken Haydn center from Arkansas in his second year of pro ball and Jack Smith of Stanford, a 6-foot-1 end, also in his second year.

Smith will give the Redskins another brother act as he is a younger brother of Center George Smith, the 'Skins regular snapper-back. He is on the West Coast at present attending dental school but will report as soon as possible. Haydn will report tomorrow at College Park.

Zimmerman will take the role of quarterback handling the ball from center in the Eagles' "T" formation, in the place of Tommy Thompson. In two plays in the All-Star game, Zimmerman had one of his kicks run back for a touchdown and on his only passing attempt was penalized 15 yards for intentionally grounding the ball.

Laughter and Tears

$800,000,000 Sum Raised At N. Y. War Bond Contest

Babe Ruth Again Clouts 'Homer' Off Johnson; Big Leaguers Beat Army, 5 to 2

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 26.—There was laughter and tears and treasured memories in the historic Polo Grounds today as more than 35,000 spectators turned out for an unforgettable baseball and vaudeville show that raised 800 million dollars in war bonds.

For the occasion 7 of the 12 living members of baseball's Hall of Fame were present in uniform and took part in a tableaux in which Walter Johnson pitched again to Babe Ruth and the fat old Bambino lifted a home run into the upper deck of the rightfield stands.

With Ruth at bat, George Sisler was at first base, Eddie Collins at second, bow-legged Honus Wagner at short, Tris Speaker in centerfield and Connie Mack waving a score card. Their ranks were filled out by other famous players of a by-gone era—Roger Bresnahan catching, Frank Frisch at third base, Duffy Lewis in left field and Jack Murphy in right.

Former Mayor James J. Walker introduced each of the old timers as well as the widow of John McGraw. She wept quietly and there was moisture in the eyes and lumps in the throats of many others as the old timers waddled around the field.

Although the program included two hours of entertainment by famous orchestras and stars of stage and screen, most of it strictly in fun, there were frequent touches of earnestness such as a short speech by Sergeant Barney Ross, who hobbled out to the pitcher's mound and expressed appreciation of the show for hundreds of wounded soldiers, sailors and marines who sat in a group behind one of the dugouts.

The show climaxed by a game between the stars of three New York major league clubs and the New Cumberland (Pa.) Army Camp team augmented by prominent players from other Army units, was sponsored by the New York Journal-American to promote the sale of war bonds.

Numerous Substitutions

The price for a box seat was a one-million-dollar war bond, for reserved seats a $1000 bond and for unreserved seats a $25 bond.

Although aided by Capt. Hank Greenberg, Lieut. John Beaseley, Lieut. Birdie Tebbetts, Corpl. Sid Hudson and Pvt. Enos Slaughter, the New Cumberland team was no match for the major leaguers and was beaten 5-2.

Both Maj. Hank Gowdy, piloting the Army team, and Leo Durocher, directing the major leaguers, made numerous substitutions after leading off with Corpl. Tommy Hughes and Curt Davis on the mound.

Joe Medwick, who replaced Charlie Keller in the third inning, hit a two-run homer and a single to lead the nine-hit winning assault. The Army made 14 hits off seven pitchers, but was successfully checked in the clutches.

Alabama, Dixie Grid Power, Forced to Quit

Manpower Shortage Is Reason Given

Only a 'Handful' Of Men at School; Coaches to Remain As Sports Instructors

By the Associated Press

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 26.—Alabama's mighty Crimson Tide, veteran of seven postseason bowl engagements, bowed today to war manpower shortage and withdrew from intercollegiate football.

In a brief statement expressing "deep regret," the university's athletic committee said suspension became inevitable when the Army adopted its rule banning athletic participation by ASTP trainees.

It was the third time since 1892 that the school has suspended football. In 1897 a faculty ruling prohibited games off the campus, and only one game was played that season and none in 1898. Alabama dropped football again during World War 1, in 1918.

All Coaches to Remain

Frank Thomas, athletic director and head football coach, was instructed to cancel Alabama's tentative schedule of four games—two with Louisiana State and one each with Georgia and Tulane. He and other members of the coaching staff will remain as instructors in the school's physical fitness program.

Alabama's 1925 eleven was the first southern team to appear in the Rose Bowl. It defeated Washington, 20-19, January 1, 1926. The following year Alabama and Stanford played a 7-7 tie at Pasadena, and in 1931 'Bama smashed Washington State, 24-0. Dixie Howell and Don Hutson led Alabama to a 29-13 triumph over Stanford in 1935, but California stopped th eTide, 13-0, in 1938.

Alabama beat Texas A. and M., 29-21, in the Cotton Bowl January 1, 1942, and last New Year's Day defeated Boston College, 37-21, in the Orange Bowl.

The athletic committee said only "two or three" of the university's athletes remained in school for this season's campaign, all others being in the armed forces. Thomas said these included Joe Domnanovich, all-American center, and Russ Craft, a starting halfback, both ROTC students awaiting call to active service.

Former Terp Promoted

Marine Corps headquarters announced yesterday the temporary promotion of Julian Fairfax Walters of Rockville, Md., from major to lieutenant colonel. Walters was formerly a football manager at the University of Maryland.

Starr to Meet Latsios

Sergt. Maxie Starr, remembered here for his two stirring battles with Pete Galiano and a game stand against Beau Jack, yesterday was signed to meet Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, now also in the Army, in the eight round semifinal to the Jackie Wilson-Lulu Constantino bout at Griffith Stadium, Monday night. Jackie Wilson (right), with whom Starr has been training, and Promoter Joe Turner, smile happily after Starr signed articles.

Latsios Meets Starr, Hopes For Jack Bout

Sergt. Maxie Starr, Edgewood Arsenal soldier, who made a game stand here against Beau Jack six weeks ago before suffering a t. k. o., returns to action Monday night when he meets Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, also in the Army, in the eight-round semifinal to the Jackie Wilson-Lulu Constantino scramble.

Latsios, victor in nine straight professional fights, is seeking a shot at Beau Jack and has been promised by Promoter Joe Turner further consideration if he gets past Starr, who showed here twice before last winter, boxing two slugging draws with the veteran Pete Galiano.

Starr has been working daily with Wilson at Turner's Arena. Yesterday he boxed four fast rounds with the Pittsburgher. Wilson then concluded his workout with three rounds of boxing with Johnny Cockfield, latest addition to Jack (Reverend) Laken's bulky stable.

Meanwhile, word received from New York reveals that Constantino, twice conqueror of Chalky Wright, has been working hard at Stillman's gym and only yesterday worked eight fast rounds, three with Johnny Dudley, three with Petey Scalzo, a former champion, and Ham Wiloby, latest bantamweight sensation. Today, Constantino will appear before the New York State Athletic Commission and ask for top-ranking as a featherweight challenger. He will report here tomorrow in time for a workout at Turner's Arena at 2 p. m.

Boxing, Obstacle Race Scheduled At Georgetown

Heeadquarters Marines turned in their second straight victory against one loss in the city-wide championship playoffs yesterday, defeating C. A. (A. A.), 6-4, in a game called in the sixth inning because of weather conditions.

Mike Duplinsky was the all-round star for the Marines, allowing only six hits and hitting a home run in the second with two mates aboard. Athanas, Marine outfielder, was the individual batting star with three for three. Huff, C. C. (A. A.) centerfield, also connected for the circuit.

Today at 5:15 p. m., Heurich Brewers, upset twice in series play, will take on C. A. (A. A.) on the Ellipse.

Roberts Recalled For Nats' Infield

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 26 (AP).—Charlie Roberts, Montgomery Rebel shortstop, will be recalled after tonight's game by the Washington Nats, Zinn Beck, business manager, said today.

Roberts will play tonight against the Atlanta Crackers in the last home stand of the Rebels this season. He will join the American League Senators Saturday, Beck said.

Roberts is hitting .323, has batted in 82 runs and stolen 23 bases, according to the latest Southern Association figures. Montgomery is a Washington farm.

Danish Revolt Hints Weaker Nazi Control

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Aug. 26.—As the Danish revolt against Nazi occupation reached new heights in spreading public disorders, speculation arose here tonight that Germany has stretched her military might so thinly over Europe that she is unable to enforce full military control of her "model protectorate."

This opinion was strengthened as Nazi occupation authorities still hesitated to pursue the ruthless tactics which characterized their earlier dealings with opposition forces, despite the serious disruption by strikes and sabotage.

Fire on Market Crowd

German soldiers, rushed to Copenhagen as the wave of strikes and sabotage increased, were reported, however, to have fired a volley of shots during a demonstration in a crowded capital market place last night.

Casualties resulting from the shooting were not reported, but other dispatches set the number of dead since the outbreaks began at 80, with 150 Danes injured in clashes with occupation troops.

General strikes were said to have spread to the harbor cities of Helsingor and Vejle, Nazi shipbuilding and freight centers, and the state emergency already proclaimed in six cities was reported to have been extended to a seventh—Roskilde.

Three organized groups were believed to be carrying on the bulk of sabotage directed against the invaders' war production and supplies.

Trained in Britain

"Saboteur commandos," Danes especially trained in Britain, were credited with most of the expert destruction directed against railway lines and German industries. They are reported to have been flown from Britain and dropped by parachute, armed wtih Danish passports, plenty of money and even ration cards.

Another group is said to consist mainly of Communists, with the third made up of ultra-nationalists.

In connection with the reports of British-trained saboteurs, the Stockholm newspaper Social Demokraten reported that 20 parachutes had been found near a dynamited railway.

Kaiser Plant Strike at End; Another Hinted

By the Associated Press

Johnsville, Pa., Aug. 26.—Thousands of strikers trooped back to their jobs in the vast Johnsville plant of Henry Kaiser's Brewster Aeronautical Corp. today after a three-day walkout—ended on "unconditional" orders of the War Labor Board and the international office of their United Automobile Workers (CIO) Union.

The workers voted unanimously to end the strike "at once"—but to call another strike vote after the 30-day "cooling off" period required under the antistrike law.

Today Frederick Riebel, jr., Brewster president, wired Navy Secretary Knox, citing "the possibility of strikes under the Smith-Connally cooling off periods in all our other plants" and suggesting that a maintenance of membership clause in the union's contract be removed temporarily.

Riebel said he and Kaiser, board chairman, believed the workers caused "production lags" because they "feared reprisals" at the hands of union trial boards.

Before the workers' back-to-work meeting, the Fourth Naval District announced the military arrest of nine more plant guards. The strike developed in protest against the arrest of four on Monday. Forty-two now are under arrest. The guards have been demanding permission to choose their assignments on the basis of seniority. The charge against those arrested is failure to take their posts in violation of their oaths.

Baby's Cries Cure Mother Of Amnesia

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 26.—A baby's tears today melted away some of the fog of amnesia which had led 22-year-old Mrs. Anna Goodwin Kennedy to turn her face away from even her own children.

The tears were those of her 2-year-old son Douglas, a visitor to her bedside at the Boston City Hospital where she was taken early Tuesday morning.

The visit was the second today. Douglas had been there earlier with Mrs. Kennedy's other child, Donald, 6, but she failed to recognize them.

Later Mrs. Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Eva Goodwin returned once more with the children.

As before, Mrs. Douglas showed no interest in the youngsters, until Douglas started to cry.

She turned, her eyes widened, and then she said:

"Why, that's my baby!"

Then she reached for the crying child.

As she cuddled the youngster, Mrs. Kennedy pointed to the Elder child, and exclaimed, as though amazed, "and that's my Donald."

A nurse attending Mrs. Kennedy stepped aside so that Mrs. Kennedy could see her mother.

"Hello, mother," she said.

D. C. Banks Plan To Remain Open Night Each Week

At the request of the War Manpower Commission, District banks will remain open one night each week beginning next month, it was learned yesterday.

A formal announcement of plans will be made this morning by the District Bankers Association, according to Eldridge D. Kendrick, secretary.

It is expected that banks will be open from 4 to 6:30 on Thursdays, and that a trial period of the new hours will begin late in September or early in October. The new hours are being established to afford banking facilities for those employed regardless of the hours they work and to accommodate a fast growing banking public. Before the new hours can go into effect they must be passed upon by the board of directors of each bank, a representative of one of the banks stated.

Woman Wins New Trial

San Francisco, Aug. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Frances Gros won the right to a new trial today through a reversal by the Ninth U. S. Circuit Court of her conviction of conspiracy to furnish vital information to the German Government. She had been sentenced to 18 months imprisonment.

Frills Lacking As Raid Leader Receives DFC

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 26.—Not only Foggia airfield but also a great mass of military etiquette and convention was severely damaged by yesterday's American raid.

When the Lightnings began setting down on their return, Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, northwest African Air Force chief, ran out on the field toward the hut where the interrogation of pilots already had begun and yelled, "Where's Colonel MacNicol?"

Lieut. Col. George MacNicol of Memphis, Tenn., who planned, organized and led the extraordinary raid, was found.

He emerged covered with dust, still wearing his flying suit and with a green and red stocking over his head. The meaning and use of that stocking is still unexplained. But that was how he presented himself to his commanding general.

Spaatz dispensed with all preliminaries.

"I'm going to give you the DFC," he said.

Everybody, including Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, commander of strategic air force, who was present, was bewildered. There always is a vast amount of formality to the presentation of any award, let alone one so important as the Distinguished Flying Cross.

It usually is accompanied by a ceremony, with everybody dressed up, buttons polished, shoes gleaming and all personnel standing rigidly at attention.

The junior officer simply handed Spaatz the medal and he pinned it on MacNicol's tunic then and there.

MacNicol stammered a "thank you, sir" and remembered to salute.

Grandi Reported In Lisbon as Head Of Peace Mission

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 26 (AP).—An Italian frontier report to the Zurich newspaper Die Tat said today that a diplomatic mission headed by Count Dino Grandi, former Italian Ambassador to Britain, had arrived in Lisbon and that its aim was believed to be armistice negotiations with the Allies.

(The report was entirely unconfirmed and London authorities said they had no knowledge of such a mission and placed no credence in the report.

(Reuters quoted Die Tat as saying arrival of the mission denoted that "Italian negotiations with a British delegation for an armistice and possibly a separate peace are being continued and even speeded up."

Chicago Paralysis Outbreak Spreads

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, today termed the last 24 hours of the polio outbreak "the worst in Chicago's history," with 34 new cases of infantile paralysis and 4 deaths reported.

In Chicago the polio outbreak totals 260 cases and 27 deaths since July 1, Dr. Bundesen said, with 91 cases and 9 deaths in the county.

*X FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1943 1B

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Jerry Kluttz now is on tour of various Government installations throughout the Nation, where 92 per cent of the country's Federal employes work. Only 8 per cent of those employed by Uncle Sam are stationed in Washingtno.

Dayton—Air Capital Of the Nation

Dayton, Ohio.—This is the air capital of the Nation, if not the world. In this farm-belt city of 300,000 are 50,000 civilian employes of the Federal Government and the vast majority of them are working on some phase of aviation. In addition, there are perhaps 10,000 enlisted men and officers stationed here, all working to keep Uncle Sam the leader of air power.

A quick look at Wright and Patterson fields here and one begins to appreciate the tremendous strides made in the science of aviation since the war. The expansion of the two fields since the emergency reflects that progress. Three years ago, while military men were still arguing over whether aviation would be a real factor in winning the war, the air center here had around 4000 civilian employes. That number has been multiplied time and again.

Dayton today has roughly half all the Federal employes in the State of Ohio. It has more Government workers than each of the neighboring States of Kentucky and Indiana.

At Wright Field is the greatest concentration of engineering brains to be found anywhere in the world. The millions of dollars' worth of special equipment used to develop every phase of aviation can't be equaled anywhere on earth. The Air Service Command, whose headquarters are at Patterson Field, is the largest single employer of labor in the world under a single command. The command has about 280,000 now in this country and thousands more will be added. It also has employes overseas.

Construction Behind

And, we're told, the potentialities of air power haven't been scratched.

Nevertheless, you can't help but feel that someone here or in Washington failed to foresee the part that air power would play in this war and the people here are paying for that shortsightedness. Particularly at Patterson Field—where the Air Service Command is located—the construction program has fallen far behind the expansion. It will be months yet before the buildings are completed and the organization can shake itself down to a steady and efficient routine. Housing for the thousands of new employes is poor, transportation is bad, and cafeterias are inadequate. These conditions lead to employe turnover. A new construction program for Wright Field was announced a few days ago.

On the other hand, Ordnance and Quartermaster had their construction programs completed—to a high degree—months ago. But it would have taken a Solomon to anticipate needs of the Air Forces two and three years ago and few people in authority would have believed him even if a Solomon had appeared.

By getting a late start, the Air Service Command has had its share of troubles in building up a staff. It has a large bloc of so called "unemployables." It's probably the largest employer of women in the world. 119,000 are on its staff now and the goal for January 1 is 140,000; 4-F's make up 13,242 and 88 per cent of all the employes aren't subject to the draft. Physically handicapped are scattered through the organization.

Great Expansion

Air Service Command ha donly four depots in peacetime. On Pearl Harbor it had only 40,000 employes. Today it has 11 major depots, 240 subdepots, and 60 other field stations in this country. It also has installations overseas. Any organization that expands so rapidly will have growing pains and the Air Forces has had its share of them but it's producing despite the many hadicaps.

Air Service Command was made a separate organization last year. Its big job is to supply the Air Forces with the materiel and equipment with which to fight. Moreover, it must maintain and repair planes and equipment, and it must train machanics and other skilled people to keep the planes in good running order wherever they may be.

Working on engines in the huge repair shop are grandmothers, Negroes and teen-aged boys and girls. Each engine is tested on a block before it is installed in a plane. That makes the life of a test pilot fairly safe.

From the sprawling warehouses at Patterson Field are shipped parts to planes the world over. Parts for grounded planes are given priority. They are sent out, if available, within 24 hours after the orders are received at the field.

The supply of plane parts is enormous. The depot here has 267,000 different parts in storage and to supply each of the planes used by Army Air Forces more than 450,000 separate parts are needed. That gives you a vague idea of the parts problem.

Good for Gripers

A visit to Dayton, incidentally, would be good treatment for you if you're one of the many gripers about Washington. You'll stand in line to eat here, too, and the food is not only higher in price but it's badly prepared. Transportation is bad in Washington but it's worse here. For no good reason, the city has several different transportation systems. Transfers are out. It costs employes, for example, 35 cents a day even when they buy a book to go to and from downtown Dayton to the command headquarters, 11 miles away.

Rents are high—they compare favorably with Washington in that respect—and clothing is higher than in the Nation's Capital. CAF 1, 2 and 3's are really finding it hard to get along here and 9 per cent of the employes have quit to take higher salaries. And they can get them at the booming nearby war plants.

Shame on Chamber!

Bluefield, W. Va., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—The Chamber of Commerce here figuratively hung its head in shame as citizens sweltered in a 92-degree temperature and it had no lemonade with which to slake their thirst. The chamber long has had a standing offer of free drinks any day the mercury touched 90, but wartime sugar rationing entered the picture.

Postscript

Spokane, Wash.—Truman Jones received a letter from Sergt. Keith Walser, serving overseas. The censor had deleted everything except this postscript:

"I don't know if this will get through the censor or not. Now you know everything I know."

Fiscal Probe Of D.C. Water Office Ends

Recommendations Due in 3 Weeks; Reforms in Billing Methods Promised

Nearing the end of its investigation of the District water registrar's office, the special committee appointed by the Commissioners will submit its report and recommendations within three weeks, it was disclosed last night.

The report, it was stated, will deal only with the fiscal matters handled by the water registrar's office, and will not touch upon the question of divided authority be the Water Department and the War Department over the reservoirs.

The committee of which Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech is chairman, is expected to recommend that property owners be held accountable for water service to their properties.

Bill Reforms Planned

The question of delayed billings, which result in extremely large bills being suddenly presented, has been gone into at length, The Post was informed, and recommendations will be made for a greatly improved accounting system.

The report will be ready before Congress returns on September 15 so that it can be given by the Commissioners to Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana, who announced Wednesday that as chairman of the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee he would investigate the situation in the Water Department.

Meanwhile, files of the Senate District Committee relating to an investigation of the Water Department have been made available to Hebert. R. V. L. Wright, special investigator for the Senate, is a member of the commission's committee.

Requests Full Report

Humphrey Beckett, Water Department superintendent, yesterday requested Water Registrar Ralph L. Hebbard to provide him with a full report on the circumstances surrounding a water bill of $120 sent to occupants of 2520 and 2518 F st. nw. Last Friday The Post disclosed that the water had been turned off for a month, because tenants could not pay the bill. In one family deprived of water there are 13 children.

Washington-Bound B. & O. Trains Kill Boy, Injure Girl

Two children, a boy and a girl, were hit by Baltimore & Ohio Washington-bound trains, as one was killed and the other critically injured, yesterday.

Killed was George E. Miller, 15, of 5304 Taylor rd., Riverdale, who was struck by a train at 5:04 p. m. at Stop 14 at Hyattsville. Details of the accident were unknown to the Hyattsville police who said the train was operated by Engineer C. A. Hilderbrandt, whose address they did not have.

Injured was Charlotte R. Slazotinek, 8, of Elkridge, Md., who was taken to St. Agnes' Hospital in Baltimore, Md., and is said to be in a critical condition. She was hit by a train at the Elkridge station at 7:28 p. m. Elkridge police said they did not know the name of the engineer nor any details, as the child was unable to talk.

Cheverly Play Center to Mark Closing Tonight

The Cheverly-Tuxedo School Recreation Center will close its summer program tonight with a special program and picnic supper beginning at 6 p. m.

Special activities of the summer will be demonstrated by the 6-to-14-year-old boys and girls who attended the center. Included will be boxing matches by the boys.

The center is one of 25 operated since July 1 under the direction of the Board of Education of Prince Georges County as an experiment. About 200 children have been enrolled at the Cheverly center. Supervisors were Bessie Lennon and the Rev. Louis Brinner, who were assisted by volunteers.

3 Manor Park Boys Collect 4000 Pounds in Paper Drive

With several weeks' start in the present paper salvage drive, the Manor Park Junior Commandos have set a fine example for other District citizens.

There are only three members in this new organization, but they have already collected 4000 pounds of paper since August 1.

It isn't the first time that Fred Klockenbrink, 14, of 421 Madison st. nw., Jack Pitman, jr., 13, of 417 Madison st. nw., and Donald Beard, 13, of 5743 5th st. nw., have collected paper. They often have watched the paper market, and whenever they noticed a scarcity in the warehouses, they set to work.

But they've done this last job more thoroughly, even working out a systemized method of collection.

Every Tuesday morning (the day trash is collected in the Manor Park area) the boys have gotten up at 4:30 a. m. to beat the city refuse division to the trash cans. Fred and Jack on bicycles collect the papers from the cans in the alleys and pile them on the corner of each street. Then Donald arrives with a wagon to pick up the papers and magazines and take them to the Klockenbrink's garage. There the boys tie them up in small bundles and stack them.

Their work is not confined to Tuesdays. Other days of the week they go from door to door collecting from all the houses in that area. By the time a week has passed they have covered them all.

Their patriotism hasn't stopped there. They'll sell the paper to one of the local warehouses, figuring to make about $25. Fred and Donald plan to purchase war stamps with their share of the money Jack is going to save toward another war bond to add to the 12 he has already purchased with money earned by both delivering and collecting papers.

Helping the war effort is a family affair for the boys. Fred's father is a captain in the U. S. Army, now stationed at Fort Washington, Md.; his mother is employed by the U. S. Air Corps. Jack's dad is in Norfolk, Va., on duty with the U. S. Navy as a chief petty officer.

The boys plan to keep up their good work unless as Fred said, "School slows us up a bit."

Walker Heads Real Estate Unit For D. C. War Loan Campaign

Moving quickly to perfect the 94 million dollar District war bond drive committee, John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance committee, yesterday anounced the appointment of Oliver M. Walker, as chairman of the Real Estate Division.

REILLY

This local development came on the heels of an announcement by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to the effect that he was confident the drive for 15 billion dollars, which will begin September 9, will be a success. This announcement was made in the course of a press conference.

Walker is president of Walker & Dunlop, Inc., and chairman of the Mortgage Loan & Finance Co., director of Title Guarantee & Trust Co. of Baltimore, vice president of the Washington Concrete Products Co., and chairman of the Board of Zoning Appeals, Montgomery County, Md.

Walker lives at 30 Dalecarlia drive, Westmoreland Hills, Md. He is a graduate of the Naval Academy with the class of 1922. He entered the real estate business in Washington in 1924.

At the Morgenthau press conference, Ted Gamble, assistant secretary asserted the Treasury had assembled the most impressive array of business, financial and industrial leaders ever set up for this, the "biggest undertaking of the war on the home front."

He said newspaper advertising to the value of four million dollars was used in the last campaign and that 25 per cent more would be used in the forthcoming drive.

Death of Schaefer Confirmed by Navy

The Navy Department yesterday officially confirmed the death of John Brinton Schaefer, 25, machinist's mate, second class, son of Mrs. Lillian Schaefer of 219 Maple st., Takoma Park, announced by The Post August 20. He was killed in action somewhere in the Mediterranean area.

Hero of Stalingrad Defense Views Film of Battle Here

Capt. Alexander Ostroukhov (right) of the Russian navy, a hero of Stalingrad, is greeted by Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko at a showing of "The City That Stopped Hitler."

Capt. Alexander Ostroukhov of the Soviet navy, bemedaled hero of the defense of Stalingrad, last night viewed the documentary film of the battle that the guns of his Volga boat helped to turn into a great German defeat.

The first participant of the epic fight to arrive in Washington, Captain Ostroukhov was a guest at the preview of "The City That Stopped Hitler — Heroic Stalingrad," shown at the Interior Department Auditorium before an audience of some 800 persons chosen by invitation.

Andrei A. Gromyko, newly appointed Ambassador of the USSR, and Mrs. Gromyko were the hosts of the evening, making their first public appearance as heads of the Soviet delegation to the United States.

The picture, cut from some 9000 feet of newsreel taken by 24 Soviet cameramen, has been edited by Paramount. It presented the City of Stalin as it lived, as it grew, as prepared as it fought, and as it vanquished.

In its making, 8 of the 24 cameramen died, all fought with the men in the front lines and several were decorated for their heroism?

Army, Navy Out to Slash Bus Fares

Counsel Petitions For Admission of Firm's Tax Data As Vital Evidence

By Kurt Kelman
Post Staff Writer

The War and Navy Departments, determined to win lower bus rates for commuters to nearby Virginia Government buildings, yesterday petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to set aside Commissioner W. J. Patterson's ruling against presentation of the bus companies' financial records in the hearings of the case.

Acting in the name of the Secretaries of War and Navy, Col. Elbert M. Barrop, counsel, called Patterson's declaration "tantamount to a final decision at this time in favor of the respondents."

A 10-page document, the petition followed a deadlocked hearing at the ICC Wednesday morning, when Colonel Barron was prevented from introducing the Capital Transit Co.'s 1942 income tax return as evidence in the case.

Ruled Irrelevant

Commissioner Patterson previously had ruled "the financial condition of the respondents . . . irrelevant."

Calling the present rates of fare "unlawful and unreasonable," Colonel Barron contended in the petition that they "discriminate" against civilian and military personnel working in the Virginia buildings and declared:

"In order to show such unreasonableness . . . to show that the removal of present discriminations would not result in an unreasonable reduction in the respondents' revenues, petitioners desire to present appropriate evidence concerning the financial structure, the income, earnings and property of the respondents."

Until Tuesday to Reply

Asserting that "calculations of decreases in gross earnings under various proposals are already on record," Colonel Barron declared it "vital" to show "that such reduction in earning will not reduce the rate of return below a reasonable level."

The respondent companies have until Tuesday to reply to this petition and further action by the ICC will be mapped after that date. The whole commission will have to pass on the matter now, it was said, before the hearings can continue.

Since the War and Navy Departments' case is built on the presentation of these financial records, a ruling by the whole commission excluding them may conclude the entire case.

Proxy Rites May Be Girl's Last Resort

It looks as if 21-year-old Bernice Edna Lynch will end up as a spinster if she depends on a wedding by telephone to make her Mrs. Bernard Trainor, so her attorneys are now arranging a marriage by proxy.

Corporal Trainor, with the Army at Natal, Brazil, has been sent legal forms by which he can bestow power of attorney to J. Benjamin Simmons, one of Miss Lynch's lawyers.

When the form is completed and returned here, Simmons, in behalf of the groom, can then repeat the marriage vows with the bride.

Meanwhile, efforts to arrange the telephone ceremony will be continued, and in case arrangements are completed before the forms are returned here, the proxy plan will be forgotten, Simmons said last night. He expects the forms to be returned within five days.

The sixth telephone attempt of last Tuesday night failed because the groom's commanding officer would not let him accept the call in Natal. Previous attempts were foiled by censorship. The Brazilian Embassy says the censorship was American, not Brazilian.

30 State Guard Members in Md. Donate Blood

Thirty members of Co. F, Second Battalion of the Maryland State Guard at Hyattsville, Md., arrived at the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center, 51 Louisiana av. nw., in uniform last night to give their blood.

Officials of the center declared yesterday contributors of blood are not the Red Cross' only vital necessity; graduate nurses also are needed urgently for duty there. Prospective employes should call Dorothy Cullins, chief nurse, at District 3300 for interviews.

Appointments for donating blood may be made by calling the same number and asking for the appointment desk. The center is located on the third floor of the Acacia Life Insurance Co.

Each Army dog has its own master, and one alternate. The dog will not attack a man in Army uniform, but even a commanding general dare not come near him in civilian clothes. Above are Corpl. Paul Tingwall and Corpl. Ed Goodnight working with their dog. Dogs such as this one will be seen at the Army show, "Back the Attack."

In the meantime, Capt. D. M. Cooper, who with Lieut. H. W. Stevens, is setting up an impressive quartermaster exhibit, has promised every child in Washington—and grownups as well—that the K-9 Corps will demonstrate that it is among the elite of the service.

The Army dogs have been in the service a little more than one year. Recruited through Dogs for Defense, a civilian agency, they already are an established part of the war and have more than lived up to their centuries of tradition as "man's best friend."

Recently from an island in the Pacific, a Yank fighting man told of one of the war-trained canine's alertness:

"P-40"—that's the dog's name, barked loudly thereby turning out the guard. The dog was found gazing intently out to sea, his hackles on end. But the soldiers could neither see nor hear anything unusual. P-40, a German shepherd, kept barking.

An hour later a Japanese fish float, used by the Japs to support their nets, washed ashore. The green float blended so well with the ocean it was imperceptible to human eyes, but P-40 had spotted it long before it washed up on land.

Among the numerous small arms exhibits at "Back the Attack," which is sponsored by The Washington Post in connection with the Treasury Department's Third War Loan Drive, will be the famous Garand semiautomatic rifle and carbine.

The Garand, officially designated by the Army as the M-1 will be found among the Ordnance Department's exhibits and its use in battle will be demonstrated. In North Africa the Garand proved its worth in the hands of British Commandos and American Rangers.

And the caliber 30 carbine, capable of firing 15 high velocity slugs from one clip with deadly accuracy, takes the place of the pistol and revolver used during World War I. Officers armed with it can carry 4 or 5 times as much ammunition for the carbine as they can for the M-1.

Victory Sidelights

40 Soldiers and Sailors Send Thanks for Knitted Material

Women volunteers, busy since pre-Pearl Harbor days making socks and scarfs for American servicemen, this week have received renewed inspiration for their work as the local Red Cross production unit received 40 "thank you" letters from soldiers and sailors all over the world.

One sailor wrote: "I have just received a warm, heavy scarf to keep the cold spray from going down my back, and I'm telling you, it really does the trick."

Another Navy man said: "My mother knits sweaters for the Red Cross but I never realized how much I would appreciate one until I received this sweater from you. I have, many times, been thankful to wear my warm sweater on an aerial watch, midnight to 4 a. m."

The Red Cross added that other volunteers are needed by the unit, and may call REpublic 8300, Extension 264, for information.

Tenders Invited On 91-Day Bills

Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, invited tenders last night for one billion dollars or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be issued on a discount basis under competitive and fixed-price bidding as hereinafter provided.

The bills of this series will be dated September 2 and will mature December 2, when the face amount will be payable without interest. They will be issued in bearer form only and in denominations of $1000, $5000, $10,000, $100,000, $500,000 and $1,000,000. Tenders will be received at Federal Reserve Banks and branches up to the closing hour, 2 p. m., Eastern war time, Monday.

Tax Warning Issued

John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, last night warned citizens they must file estimates of income tax by September 15 and also must pay the quarterly income tax payment if their taxes are not completely taken care of by withholdings from their wages.

City News in Brief

Penalization Upheld

The penalization of E. W. Williams, court reporter whose automobile was ticketed as an alleged pleasure driving violator at the Army and Navy Country Club, on the Office of Price Administration's constitutional authority to assess fines, was upheld by Col. Joseph Fairbanks, local attorney acting as appeals judge for the OPA, it was announced at District headquarters yesterday. Williams was fined one A coupon.

5907 Get Gas Coupons

A total of 1847 District automobile owners exchanged their old B and C coupons for the new variety Wednesday, boosting the total to 5907 in the past week, but many thousands more still must obtain their ration books, the local Office of Price Administration declared yesterday.

The old-type coupon will not be valid after next Wednesday, it was emphasized and ration boards expect a terrific rush of applicants early next week. Hence, OPA advised motorists to apply immediately to avoid backlogging of accumulated requests.

Gift to Smithsonian

Mementos of the Susan B. Anthony League were presented to the Smithsonian Institution yesterday on the 23rd anniversary of the adoption of the Women Suffrage amendment to the Constitution.

Among the relics donated was the gavel used by Susan B. Anthony at conventions over which she presided and a banner used in a New York parade. Arrangements for the presentation were made by Mrs. Ada Van Loon B. Magee of Park Towers, and custodian of the museum pieces as well as the last acting president in the league. Among the Washingtonians present were Dr. Bartlett B. James of the Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

Three Fined at Rockville

John J. Curtin, proprietor of a beer parlor on MacArthur blvd., near Glen Echo, Md., and Harold W. Williams, an employe of the place, were fined $50 and $25, respectively, after their conviction in Rockville Police Court yesterday on gambling charges. The arrest grew out of the alleged operation of a pin ball machine. Officers testified they were paid off $1.60 after winning on the machine.

Cecilia Pond, proprietor of Bethesda Inn, on Wisconsin ave., was fined $50 and costs after conviction on a charge of selling whisky to a man under the influence of intoxicants.

Work Rushed On Housing, Health Laws

Low-Cost Homes, Tightening-Up Of Prostitution Controls Planned

Post Staff Writer.

Drafts of legislation needed to effectuate the recommendations of the d'Alesandro subcommittee, which last June issued a blistering report on housing and health conditions in the District of Columbia, are being speeded along in preparation for the end of the congressional recess, The Post learned yesterday.

The most important recommendation of the Public Health subcommittee, of which Representative d'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland is chairman, dealt with the necessity of permanent low-cost family housing here.

Plans are well underway for introduction of a bill appropriating money to the National Capital Housing Authority to replace insanitary dwellings in the District.

This measure, whose need was impressed on the committee members by a first-hand tour of slums here, is likely to be introduced by Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee.

In its report, which startled the District by its vigorous condemnation of housing conditions here, the D'Alesandro committee said:

"We are cognizant of the fact that such viciously insanitary housing as now exists in the District of Columbia is possibly more menacing to health than the distribution of impure food and drugs."

The report was the culmination of three months of hearings which were called after a series of Post articles describing insanitary housing conditions here was read into the Congressional Record by Representative Plumley (Republican) of Vermont.

Prostitution Control

Another important piece of legislation deals with the control of prostitution here. The subcommittee, in the course of its investigations, learned that more soldiers were infected with venereal disease in the District than in any other city in the Nation.

The subcommittee called for tightening of the laws relating to prostitution. A bill similar to SR-2819 which died in the last Congress, making solicitation subject to penalties whether indoors or outdoors, either by word or by sign, is scheduled for early submission to Congress.

The committee, is was learned, has not received from the Rent Control Administration here, a draft of legislation which would require registration of all property and rents so that rents could be reduced by the Rent Control Administration. The administration has already recorded opposition to such an amendment.

Congress also is expected to be asked to make compulsory the taking of chest X-rays of all Government employes.

Presented by Coulter

The need for this legislation was dramatically presented by Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, Director of the Bureau of Tuberculosis of the District Health Department, who showed the committee X-rays of infected lungs of newly employed Government workers. Coulter was commended for his frankness by the committee. There is some question, authoritative sources said, whether this legislation would be sponsored by the District Committee or by the Civil Service Committee.

Many of the recommendations made in the d'Alesandro report have already been carried out. During the investigation the committee secured priorities, once refused, for a venereal disease hospital at Gallinger, which is now in use.

District officials discovered that they had the necessary authority to give medical examinations to persons seized in vice raids, and compel infected persons to take treatment.

The committee recommended that venereally infected selectees, unfit for military service, be held by the military and given compulsory treatment.

10,000 Rejected Here

A few weeks ago the War Department announced that men otherwise eligible with uncomplicated venereal infections would be inducted and treated by the Army. This still leaves, however, a large number of men yet forced to undergo treatment. Health Department records show that there are approximately 10,000 men in Washington who have been rejected because of venereal infections.

The committee requested the Board of Condemnation of Insanitary Dwellings to "take a new lease on life and use its authority to the fullest extent to compel profiteering property owners, agents or operators to either repair or demolish insanitary dwellings." Since the publication of the report, the board has been increasingly active in taking proceedings against insanitary properties.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Melvina Lindsay

The Magazine Cover Girl Goes to Work

All the old standbys of the magazine covers, the glamorous bathing beauty, party girl, sweater girl, tennis girl, the lovely young thing stretched out on the grass or gazing at the moon, will be missing this September. In their places will be the (glamorous of course) girl with the pitchfork, the laundry bundle, the streetcar change box, the teacher's pointer, the librarian's stamp, and—believe it or not—the girl with the razor. Thus has a complete revolution in feminine life been graphically preserved for future archeologists.

With the approaching Labor Day finding approximately 17 million women employed outside the home, 150 national magazines, for the month at least, are idealizing on their covers the working rather than the idle woman. Also—believe it or not—they are not presenting the much photographed women welders, riveters, etc., who hold the spectacular highly paid jobs in war industry. They are rather giving a break to the girl who keeps life going for the war-workers and the rest of us—the one who helps out on the farm, at the grocery, the laundry, the bakery, the restaurant, on the streetcars and buses, in the schoolroom and library, the barber shop, the police station, the garage.

Women Keep Life Moving at Home

Women in necessary civilian jobs constitute the theme of the magazine cover display, which was arranged through the magazine bureau of OWI, of which Miss Dorothy Ducas is chief. Many of the magazines carry articles telling how women are keeping civilian life functioning and explaining the needs and opportunities in this field.

Look at these September magazine covers as they begin to appear on the racks and you will realize to what extent women are making the wheels go around here at home. Favorite of the magazine artists is the farm girl. Frequently she appears with a pitchfork; again she is picking apples, driving a tractor, sorting tobacco, feeding a young calf. Always she is satin skinned and perfectly coiffed, in her becoming straw hat, gingham shirt and well-tailored overalls, and minus any beads of sweat or stringy hair. But such is life among the magazine covers, and why should not the hay pitcher have her chance for glamour along with the Country Club debs?

Another favorite on the covers is the transportation girl—the bus or taxi driver, the streetcar conductor, the ticket agent, the trainman. The much-needed services of school teachers and librarians also are stressed. And who will not rejoice to see these much-maligned women freed of their prim collars and stern visages and given some Hollywood allure?

Food and Clothes The Big Problems

The foremost civilian problems, obtaining food and clean clothes, have appealed to many patriotic-minded women, the magazine covers and stories reveal. Women have gone into bakeries, restaurants, cafeterias, grocery stores and laundries not only to make extra money but to help solve problems that they as housewives had experienced. The continual plaint of the war-workers has been, "We can't get decent food," and "We can't get our clothes washed." Home women have frequently had these needs in mind when they volunteered for civilian work.

The women who help "man" radio stations and airports, run offices, pack fruit, operate sawmills, staff dry cleaning establishments, keep civic services going, also have their places among the cover girls. The girl barber, a sweet young thing in a white uniform, is shown tenderly shaving a serviceman in khaki. A policewoman in trim uniform enforces the law without losing an iota of her charm.

In fact, service on the civilian front is made so alluring as well as so important on the magazine covers that the women who have heretofore resisted its call will now no doubt seek out their neighborhood groceries, laundries, bakeries, restaurants, etc., and volunteer their services without delay. There are about 4,100,000 of these women, all less than 45 years olds, not living on farms, and not responsible for the care of children less than 16 years old. And they are urgently needed.

Spice It

For those who are extra fond of cinnamon toast, put a big shaker of cinnamon and sugar on the table—let 'em sprinkle it over the toast cubes before adding cream or milk.

Sweeteners to spin over the bread from a pitcher are a delight to youngsters in particular. They all "go good" with bread, too—molasses, honey, corn or maple sirup. So put whatever you have on the breakfast table and let them take their choice.

1st Woman Officer Accepted In Civil Engineer Corps

ENSIGN KATHLEEN F. LUX

The Civil Engineer Corps of the Navy, composed since 1867 of highly trained engineers who must meet strict technical eligibility requirements, has accepted its first woman officer as a full-fledged member of this branch of the Naval Service. She is Ensign Kathleen F. Lux, Civil Engineer Corps-USNR.

Ensign Lux, whose home is Logansport, Ind., holds a civil engineering degree from Purdue University, where she graduated in 1942. Her special field is sanitary engineering. On duty now in the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Ensign Lux is an assistant in the office of Comdr. C. P. Conrad, Civil Engineer Corps, USNR, director of the construction department. She has been serving there for some months as a reserve officer without the special Civil Engineer Corps status.

It was over her father's and brother's protests that Ensign Lux decided to study engineering. They thought it was no profession for a woman.

"I tried to follow their advice," she explains, "but everything else bored me. I spent three days studying home economics, but that was too much. I sneaked out and got into sanitary engineering."

The problem which loomed largest in the eyes of her father, Carl Lux, was that her college engineering course involved surveying camp trips. Of this, Ensign Lux says: "It's true; I was the only girl among 80 men, but I did my part. I even spliced wires until I can still do it in my sleep. It worked out all right, and father found he didn't have anything to worry about."

Upon graduation, Ensign Lux worked with the Indiana State Board of Health, doing sanitary engineering work such as inspecting tourist camps and welfare institutions.

Her present duties are principally concerned with keeping track of materials and supplies.

"But what I really would like," she says, "would be to get out in the field doing sanitary engineering work."

"Even out on Island X?" she was asked.

"Of course, on Island X. But they'll never let me go."

Ensign Lux, who is 22 years old, enjoys working with men, but she confesses that "just one other girl" in the office would be rather nice. There are very few women, however, who hold the necessary engineering degrees for Civil Engineering Corps assignments.

Ensign Lux entered the Naval Reserve on November 28, 1942, and received her commission after training at the U. S. Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School, Northampton, Mass.

What to Do With a House Built in 1910

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

It's a plain, honest little house with no side but a lot of sturdy comfort about it. Built around 1910 and good for another 50 years! But out of style without being old enough to have the dignity of an antique. The question is—how to do it over pleasantly without spending too much money.

The living room isn't very large, has a plain red brick fireplace, dark woodwork. The furniture isn't bad, but there's nothing special about it either. The dining room is bigger and the furniture here is golden oak—stanch and strong but homely. There are four bedrooms—two downstairs and two in the attic. Here again the furniture is commonplace but sturdy and practical.

Well, here's a plan for alterations. For the living room walls, a plaid wallpaper in browns on white will make the dark woodwork seem deliberate and right. Then a plain effect beige rug would be a good choice—either broadloom or an oval-braided rug in beige shades or a string rug in beige. Then for the curtains, full ruffled white muslin with slip covers and cushions in plain greens, plain yellows, plain orange all in brilliant shades, with lamp bases and accessories in bottle green glass and in terra cotta.

For the dining room, the old oak furniture could have the finish taken off, then a bleaching and pickling job to bring it up to date. For the walls, paper in sunny yellow with a faint design in white and here again white muslin for the curtains, but this time a green rug. Then a couple of tired old easy chairs that stand in the bay window can have slip covers of flowered cretonne with greens and yellows prominent in the pattern.

The bedrooms would be sweet if each is done in one color with white ruffled muslin curtains throughout, and white crocheted string rugs throughout and white quilted bedspreads with flower appliqued designs, each repeating the predominant color in the different rooms. Otherwise walls and furniture in each room will be painted to match—one room will be all in robin's egg blue with the white curtains, rugs and spread. Another will have pink walls and furniture. Another will be pale green, another pale gray.

Unusual Play Costume

This isn't any ordinary jumper, nor is it for any ordinary person. It's for the woman who likes individual clothes, who gets excited about the texture and quality of fabrics.

Because the fabric in this costume is very exciting. By Moscow out of California—that's the story: a floral-patterned crash linen which was manufactured in Russia and styled by a California designer. It's fashioned into the fetching pinafore sketched and also into a dirndlish skirt, and coupled with a handsome blouse (solid brown, green, or red, which harmonize with the respective colors of the linen's floral pattern, which is a fabric story in itself—a spun rayon which looks like fine silk broadcloth. (Nice with your suits, incidentally.)

It's a gay garment to wear around the house, to take along for weekend outings, and one that will be as good next year (this kind of linen goes on forever). It's about $23, in sizes 1-18.

THE IDES of OCTOBER and COUPON No. 18

By Ruth Gregory

Time was when a woman went out and bought shoes to match the color of a new outfit. Time was when a woman could merely shrug if she made a mistake in shoe purchasing. There were more available; leather wasn't a precious commodity.

In this present, it's a vastly different story. Your shoes must be selected with an eye to flexibility for different costumes, to durability. Making a mistake, is a costly matter to you as well as to your country.

That's why, and remembering the frenzied last-minute rush in shoe stores in mid-June when many a woman out of desperation made such costly errors and shoe salesmen nearly went out of their minds, we think it's a good idea getting shoe-wise now. (October 31 is the expiration date for No. 18.)

When you—college girl, career woman, or matron—can get a pair of shoes built for walking, that comes out of the clod-hopper class and is styled along lines as sleek as these photographed, your No. 18 will not have been used in vain.

That spectator pump (center, below) in black, for instance, will carry you in comfort and go with practically everything in a woman's wardrobe excepting glitter. (It's also available in brown and is about $13.)

For women who don't like pumps for street wear for one reason or another (their feet need more support, or they just prefer a tie), we'd recommend trim oxfords like those pictured. The antiqqued calfskin oxford (far left) with the decorative seams (left below) will blend happily with any number of fall ensembles (about $9). It's the satiny finish on the black calfskin oxford (right below) and the uninterrupted line of it, that gives this shoe "style" for it's sturdy look, and makes it a perfect tailored suit shoe.

If you're one of the women whose closet already boasts walking shoes, we'll be talking about news in dressy shoes next week. Meanwhile, for further information regarding the shoes photographed, call NAtional 4200, extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is understandable why a nursing mother, who is reaping the satisfaction of seeing her baby's weight go up in a steadily mounting line, would be disdainful of bottles.

But it is smart to introduce a bottle now and then, even though the baby has no real nutritional need for it. It gives him a new kind of feeding experience and the mother a little time off from the continous job of providing nourishment.

These occasional bottles are well-named "relief" bottles and unless the baby is allergic to cow's milk, he should be happy and contented with almost any clean, sensible concoction of milk the mother prepares for him.

It is forethoughtful to try relief bottles first when the mother is at home. Then she can determine the baby's reaction to them. It would be unfair to leave a stranger and a bottle of strange food for the baby and then expect her to cope with the unexpected results.

Relief bottles can be figured by any standard chart of bottle formulas. If the baby is very young and still is taking five feedings a day, the relief bottle will be one-fifth of the whole day's supply. If only four nursings are given, then one-fourth of the whole day's formula will make one good relief bottle.

The preparation of this one bottle is just as important as for a whole day's supply. The formula must be boiled, cooled and put into a sterilized bottle just as if the baby's whole nourishment were dependent upon it.

Relief bottles are splendid so long as one does not substitute them regularly for a nursing.

A relief bottle occasionally gives the mother a rest and baby a change; one used regularly introduces weaning, for that is exactly the way one starts to wean a baby. One bottle substituted for one breast feeding, then two, etc.

Just because a relief bottle works well and everyone is pleased with the result is no excuse for weaning a baby permanently. Used properly it prevents the mother from feeling herself a martyr to her duty.

Human Growth Should Be Measured by Both Height and Weight

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

HUMAN GROWTH can be measured in various ways. First, simplest, most popular and, incidentally, the best guide is to measure the height of the body. Unhappy the boy or girl in whose household from year to year there was not a door jamb or wall space where on every birthday he or she was stood in bare feet and the height, age and date eternally recorded.

There is also the growth in weight, less spectacular, but an almost equally accurate guide.

Then there is the combination of height and weight which gives a rough index of the "constitution." It is a still more accurate method because, in general, an above-the-average heavy child is below the average for age in height.

But there are many other methods of measurement of growth. The "X-ray age," for instance, may be entirely different form the height or weight index of development.

The bones are not solid or continuous at birth. If they were, the body couldn't grow at all. But there are soft places at the ends of the long bones, made of cartilage at birth, which grow in length and finally become bony centers of ossification. The ossification occurs on the average at a pretty definite age period.

The X-ray reveals whether ossification has occured or not and on this basis the X-ray age, or bone age, or ossification age, is determined—a much more scientific estimate of real age than the chronological or birthday age.

This last consideration shows that the real springs and seats of growth are deep in the tissues themselves. Height and weight are only superficial manifestations, or, rather, gross results of a process to which every cell is a contributor.

Growth, in fact, is a very mysterious and poetical process. After the physical process is completed we have spiritual growth to record—maturity, vigorous old age and senescence. Some people never reach maturity, but do reach senescence.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After 37 Miserable Years, Old Maid Wed Bachelor Who Wasn't Thought Much of a Catch, but Proves To Be Wonderful Husband; Still, She's Not Happy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am coming to you as a last resort, in an effort to still make something of my life. I came into this world an unwanted child, had an unhappy childhood, a still unhappier adolescence and now, at the age of 44, I am a wretched, miserable woman with nothing much to live for. I suppose I am the kind of person whom a psychologist or psychiatrist would call a misfit, an introvert, a neurotic, or what-have-you.

I married at the age of 37, after three unmercifully troubled years of thyroid disturbance, which led to an operation. The man I married was a bachelor,—not considered a very good catch in my home city, mostly because of his personality, and the gossip ran something like this: "Well, I guess it was the best she could do, the way she is . . ." etc. And the same was said of him. Nevertheless, he has made me a good husband and I have made him a good wife. He worships the ground I walk on; and I love him as much as I have the capacity to love any man.

She Yearns to Do More With Her Life

Since coming to Washington seven years ago, we have made few, if any, friends. Neither of us is a "good mixer," and so can't help the other in that respect. We go to a movie once a week; I go shopping quite often; we go bus riding on Sunday afternoons, have dinner at some nice place occasionally; and that is the extent of our "social life." I know, of course, that I can go to church services and church gatherings in an effort to make friends. And I have gone some; but do not enjoy it. So why keep it up, year after year? I might add that I was reared in a very strict Christian home, and the memories of that home are none too pleasant.

I have been unsuccessful at finding war work to do. I could not pass the physical tests for the jobs I wanted, and was not suited to others. I have not been trained for any kind of office or business job, even if I could stand the strain. For 10 years before my marriage, I clerked in a store owned by some of my people,—mostly because I lacked the initiative to do better for myself. I feel that my life has been pretty much of a mess from start to finish and yet the Lord sees fit to let me go on living,—so there must be a reason for my being here. I am an excellent housekeeper and cook. I dress well and am not hard to look at. I am musically inclined and read quite a bit. But mostly I just stick to a housekeeping routine.

Is it too late now to make anything of my life?—to "find myself," as the saying goes? Could it be possible that "life begins at 40?"—or just beyond that? If you cannot give me any encouragement, at least I should appreciate your views. LINDA.

Successful Marriage Is a Great Achievement

DEAR LINDA: It seems to me you are making a remarkably good thing of your life, considering the staggering handicaps you have had to surmount. According to your story, you got off to a very poor start; and arrived at the age of 37 still an old maid,—sickly, neurotic, unversed in the social graces, and beholden to relatives for the perfunctory clerical job that gave social pattern to your barren existence. Since that time, seven years ago, you have really made history, in comparison to your previous record.

You have achieved marriage with a good man who worships the ground you walk on; and you have honestly earned that worship, by making him a good wife, who combines the skills of excellent cook and housekeeper with the endearing traits of loyal devotion and discerning appreciation. It is very greatly to the credit of both that you two,—who, by your own account, had seemed unattractive to all other eyes, and hardly a "figure for romance,"—should have built a relationship so stout and kindly out of "rejected" material. And since the accomplished fact of a sincerely valued marriage is one of the few really worthwhile gains in life, and one which, unfortunately, is too seldom attained by even the most magnetically popular men and women,—possibly because they, in their spoiled popularity, tend to place more emphasis upon "getting" than "giving,"—you might well be pardoned for lapsing into a placid contentment with your lot, just as is. You might justifiably reflect that you have already claimed your fair share of the gold at the rainbow's end,—and have it securely potted in your own back yard.

Inferiority Complex Accounts for Unrest

I judge that your intrinsic discontent and desire to "make more" of yourself stem from a deeply ingrained inferiority complex;—and that it is this personality-constricting affliction, moreover, which constitutes your chief obstacle to finding friends and "grappling them to thy soul with hoops of steel." Since you read quite a bit, and since it would be a major teaching job to instruct you in the psychologically emancipating business of "finding yourself,"—a job too lengthy and detailed to be undertaken in the limited space of this column,—I wonder if you couldn't master that chunk of education by carefully studying a few helpful books and putting their precepts into faithful practice in your daily experience?

The books I would recommend are these (a curiously diversified list, I may say): "The Sermon on the Mount," by Emmet Fox; "The Self You Have to Live With," by Winfred Rhoades; "Why We Don't Like People," by Donald S. Laird; and "How to Be Happy Though Human," by Dr. Beran Wolfe. The first-named book provides a magnificently simple, practicable, and result-getting spiritual philosophy. The second is along the same lines, driving home the same truths from a different slant. Laird's book (he is a professor of psychology) acquaints the reader with negative personality traits to guard against or get rid of; and positive, winsome traits to acquire,—and he makes very clear whereof he speaks.

Alternative Avenues To Self Improvement

Dr. Wolfe's book (as the preface explains) sketches certain basic principles of the good life, seeks to stimulate the reader to further self-training and self-clarification, and, finally, suggests certain practical measures for the extension of the reader's "vital horizons." It is a simple, forthright volume, written in popular style, "for men and women who are not afraid of ideas." Although published in 1931, and therefore not the "last word" in its field, it contains permanently sound stuff of great potential value to the beginning student of "self." I don't know of any better "layman's language" book of the kind. As a last suggestion,—offered in case you should despair of self-teaching—there is the Institute of Applied Religion and Psychology, of which Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich is dean, that holds classes regularly at the local Y. W. C. A., daytime and evening. The emphasis of this instruction is on "creative thinking," carried through into daily action; and it may provide the perfect answer to your deeply felt need. M. H.

Keeping Leftovers

Keep leftovers safely in flavor-protective coverings. Make use of mayonnaise jars, cheese jars and other wide-mouth food containers as refrigerator dishes. Have some snap-on bowl covers to put over your regular dishes when they are placed in the refrigerator. Wrap solids in waxpaper or bread wrappers.

For Supper

Have you blackberry, raspberry or strawberry jam? Stir some into a pitcher of icy-cool milk and serve it with cubes of bread or toast as a refreshing summertime supper. At the end of a hot and busy day, both you and your family will welcome this simple but nourishing fare—after all, "break-and-milk" is supper in the best American tradition.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

It is harvest time for Vitamin A, the vitamin that comes in all the yellow fruits and vegetables and can be stored in the body. So help yourself to carrots, squash, pumpkin, sweet potatoes, yellow corn, apricots, peaches and melons.

Right along with these, you have a big variety of the green leafy vegetables — kale, spinach, beet greens, mustard greens, turnip tops, endive, broccoli and collards. All of these are rich sources of Vitamin A.

In case it has slipped your mind, this is the vitamin that helps to build up resistance to infection and gives you protection against the cold bug this winter. The scientists won't like this, but it is also a beauty vitamin. If your skin is dry and rough, and your nails and hair brittle, it may well be that you are not eating enough green leafy and yellow vegetables. They furnish the vitamin in abundant amounts. There are some other special sources—liver, yellow cheese, egg yolk, whole milk, cream, butter and enriched margarine.

You need a certain amount of Vitamin A every day, but if you get any extra, it is not wasted. It is stored in the body for future use. The average grown-up requires 5000 units, the amount you get in one-half cup of greens. During pregnancy, the Vitamin A requirement is stepped up 1000 units because of its role in the formation of tooth enamel. The teeth are under construction before the baby is born. During the nursing period, the requirement goes up to 8000 units a day to meet the increased demands of the growing child.

It is so easy to get enough Vitamin A in food that it is a wonder anybody's diet is deficient. But the whole thing hinges on your likes and dislikes. A single food can give you an abundance. One-half cup of greens furnishes 9000 units; but how often do you eat greens?

The only other vitamin you store is D, the sunshine vitamin. Make the most of these last days of summer. Right now, the sun is about 12 times as strong in ultraviolet rays as it will be in the winter. Get a surplus. It will help carry you through the cold months.

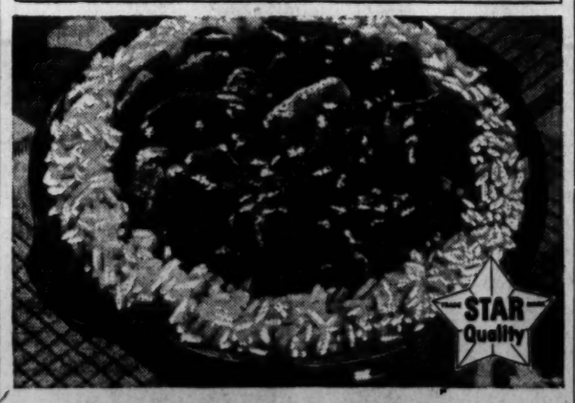
Less Elbow Grease Produces the Best Muffins

The lazy cook may make the best muffins. Tests at the United States Department of Agriculture showed that the minimum of mixing gives the tenderest, lightest muffins of the most even texture. Too much mixing, on the other hand, may cause toughness, holes or "tunnels" in the muffin, and a peaked top.

The muffins that proved best in the tests were made by an easy three-step mixing method. The first step is sifting all the dry ingredients together. The second is combining all liquids—slightly beaten eggs, milk and melted fat. The third step is adding the dry to the liquid and stirring just enough to moisten all ingredients. This way the muffins have only one quick mixing, which prevents the gluten in the flour from developing and causing tunnels and tough texture. Also, the muffin gets the full leavening from the baking powder because the powder has little chance to act until the muffins are in the oven. But for success with this method of mixing, all liquid ingredients should be about the same temperature when combined. The eggs and milk should be at room temperature rather than chilled, and the fat warm, rather than hot.

Standard proportions for muffins used in these tests were: 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt and 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 2 to 4 tablespoons of fat.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat



Lamb Curry! A Big Meal for 6

Even with rationing you can serve a big, hearty meat dinner that's so filling, so substantial . . . it fills the bill as well as any pre-war meal you ever had! For a delicious casserole of Lamb Curry takes only 1½ points if you use lamb breast, only 6 points if you use lamb shoulder!

Either way, you'll have enough for 5 or 6 man-sized meat servings. If you use Armour's Star Lamb, you'll be sure of rich flavor and high nutrition, regardless of the cut you choose!

Have 1½ lbs. of Star Lamb (breast or shoulder) cut into 1-inch cubes and brown lightly with ⅓ cup chopped onion. When light brown, add 3 cups hot water, 2 tspa. salt, ¼ tsp. thyme and simmer 1½ hours over very low heat. When done, add 2 tbspa. flour mixed with ½ tsp. curry powder and enough cold water to make thin paste. Meanwhile, cook ¾ cup rice in 4 cups salted water until tender (about 25 minutes). Rinse in hot water. Line casserole with thick layer of rice, packing well. Pour in curry mixture and serve at once.

Nomadic Capital Resident Reads Cards For Causes

Former Actress 'Settles' Down Here While Doing Her Bit for Service Aid Organizations

By Patricia Grady

"We've rented a postoffice box and are settling down for the duration."

The peregrinating Mrs. James L. Dixon describes in a sentence her nomadic wartime life. Her headquarters is in Washington where the husband of this former radio, screen and stage actress works with the Army's Signal Corps. But since his duties are often traveling ones, attractive Mrs. Dixon busies herself with a multitude of activities from New York to California.

Autrey-Hollywood.
MRS. J. L. DIXON.

Before her marriage five years ago in California, dark-haired Mrs. Dixon made her public appearances under her maiden name, Jean Pinckert, and also as movie starlet Elaine Rowan. Now, as Jean Dixon, she divides her time between a few selected drama pupils and fortune telling for a cause. Already, her psychic prowess with a deck of cards—a technique learned early in life from an old gypsy—has turned over $2000 into the coffers of worthy service organizations.

Does she believe in what the cards tell her? "Well," explains Mrs. Dixon, "it's not that I believe in fortune telling . . . but so many things have turned out the way my cards have predicted, I'm beginning to treat their forebodings with a certain amount of respect."

Studied With Max Reinhardt

A protege of Max Reinhardt, this smooth-voiced brunette played in his production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and at one time played the Passion Play role of Mary Magdalen. While she was being groomed for movie stardom, Jimmy Dixon bought up her contract and made her his bride. That, Mrs. Dixon feels, was the beginning of her career, not the end of it.

A vivacious personality with many a story to tell about her past and present accomplishments, Mrs. Dixon would rather talk about her husband. He's been trying his hand at songwriting lately, and although new to the game, he already has one song published.

The inspiration for the song came to the author through a train acquaintance of Mrs. Dixon. Traveling east, en route from Los Angeles, Mrs. Dixon spent long hours talking to a young soldier from Nebraska, who was soon to be shipped to Alaska. He poured out his heart to her, with particular reference to his tragedy of leaving his girl. Mrs. Dixon told him that her husband would write a song for the soldier and his Nebraska lady love. That's how "There's a Sweetheart in Nebraska" was born.

'Sweetheart In Nebraska'

On its way to the soldier's northern post is a copy of the tune. The lyric tells the story:

"There's a sweetheart in Nebraska
And if anyone should ask ya
She's the one for me.

Just a doughboy in Alaska
But my heart's in old Nebraska
Where it ought to be.

By the old Platte River
I was all aquiver
When I kissed her 'neath that honeysuckle vine.

There's a sweetheart in Nebraska
And I'm coming back to ask her
To be mine, all mine."

Mr. Dixon is going to keep turning out tunes in his spare time, "just for the fun of it." Most of them are tailor written for friends. Later in the year, his talented wife is hoping to be an almost fulltime resident of the Capital. She's expecting to move out of that postoffice box and into their apartment at the Dorchester.

Civic-Minded Citizens Build Playground at Long Branch, Md

Established Citizens Association and War Bond Drawings To Provide Funds

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

It's just one big family out in Long Branch Village, a new subdivision near Silver Spring, Md., where more than 100 war workers are showing their progressiveness by improving their community of homeowners-all on their own.

Faced with building priorities and manpower shortage, it was no easy job to achieve projects for the success of community betterment. Difficulties did not faze them, however, and with all families pitching in, the settlement can now boast of a community playground that is unlike any other in Montgomery County—all as a result of volunteer work.

When the male contingent of Long Branch Village organized a citizens' association last May their first objective was a play ground to keep their 50 youngsters off the streets, new lawns and out of mischief. All they had to begin with was a tract of wilderness, densely wooded, imbedded with rocks and ridges. The Maryland Park and Planning Commission gave them the authority to use the land but the labor equipment was up to the residents.

Did Work in Spare Time

Like pioneers, the men hailing from all parts of the country took their only spare time, Sundays for two and a half months, cleared the acreage by cutting down large trees, digging out rocks and grading the land. Long Branch Creek, a natural stream running across the site, created a hazard, so they built a bridge, a rustic one 50 feet long, of saplings with two huge trees for a foundation.

Anywhere from 6 to 14 men worked in shifts, with R. A. Purnell in charge, until last week, when the playground was ready for use.

Although it was fully equipped with swings, slides, sandbox, chairs, tables and even a stone fireplace, the problem of supervision came up. Since most of the youngsters are of pre-school and elementary age, parents felt such a playground a waste unless it is properly supervised. It was at this point that the women, excluded from membership in the association, proved a godsend. Mrs. R. A. Haley, appointed by President Benjamin Ellin to take over duties of handling the situation, called a meeting of all mothers to decide on some program of safety for their young ones.

After agreeing that the playground should be supervised at least three days a week, a dozen women volunteered to take turns as supervisors, always two serving together. So any Tuesday or Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. and from 2:30 until 4:30 p. m. or Friday from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. the following women can be seen keeping the children happy:

Mrs. Haley, Mrs. A. S. Crissafulli, Mrs. E. R. Nicolai, Mrs. H. C. Lockwood, Mrs. L. M. Dabney, Mrs. R. A. Purnell, Mrs. J. L. Van Derburgh, Mrs. J. P. Gillette, Mrs. P. O. Ady, Mrs. J. L. Yingling, Mrs. Russell Malamut and Mrs. Myron Diefendorfer.

All this set-up took money, but funds were raised by war bond drawings and membership dues to the association. Purchase of an extension ladder by the group now brings in 75 cents a day from renters.

Propose Other Improvements

Equal in size to a large city block, the playground is situated at the end of Schuyler road within a short walking distance of all the homes. By this fall 138 homes are expected to be occupied.

Although the women play a major part in the playground program, new projects are created solely by the men. Despite the closed membership to women, the safety and comfort of the latter are high on the list of major activities for the coming season.

Latest proposal is the erection of a shelter at the bus stop, on Old Bladensburg Road and Franklin ave., a chore the men say they can build some Sunday afternoon.

Other ventures they plan to tackle are adequate street lighting, better transportation, war bond selling and social events to which the women will be invited. In a few weeks E. R. Nocolai, a former newspaperman, plans to resume the publication of a community paper packed with items concerning all the neighbors.

Lieut. Garner And Bride To Live Here

Lieut. (j. g.) Meryl E. Garner, USN, and his bride, now on a honeymoon to Lookout Mountain, Tenn., will come to Washington to make their home.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Martin of Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jared Owen Martin, of Little Rock, Ark. Lieutenant Garner's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Garner of Brady, Nebr.

The ceremony took place on Tuesday, in Little Rock, in St. Andrew's Cathedral. Miss Agnes Martin was her sister's only attendant.

Mrs. Garner is a graduate of the George Washington University Law School, where she was a member of Phi Delta Delta legal sorority. She was also a member of Phi Mu sorority of George Washington University and is a member of the District of Columbia Bar.

The bridegroom before entering the Navy was with the Treasury Department as examiner of Questioned Documents. He is a graduate of the Washington College of Law and is a member of Sigma Delta Kappa legal fraternity.

Chinese Students To Be Feted

Among their guests will be Miss Keng-E Chuan of George Washington University; Po-Kao Lee of the Chinese Embassy, and Mr. and Mrs. William Dennis. Mr. Dennis is with the Division of Cultural Relations, the Department of State.

Visitors At Hot Springs

Hot Spring, Va., Aug. 26.—Latest arrivals at the Homestead, Virginia Hot Springs, include Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. D. C. Bress, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Bailey and son; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene LeBaron and Hart S. Cowperthwait, of Washington.

Mme. Litvinov To Visit The Jos. E. Davies

Before returning to Russia, Mme. Litvinov, wife of the former Soviet Ambassador to Washington, will visit Joseph E. Davis, one-time American Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and Mrs. Davis, at their summer estate, Camp Topridge in the Adirondacks.

Now enjoying a quiet holiday at Lake Mahopac in upper New York, Mme. Litvinov, will presumably return to Washington to gather up her personal belongings, before saying farewell to America. Since her husband's departure for Russia in May, she has been living in New York, on the seventeenth floor of a large apartment house with a view of the famous skyline, doing some writing, practicing on the piano, enjoying the company of her friends.

Energetic Helen Worden of the World-Telegram staff in New York, journeyed to Lake Mahopac to get the first interview with Mme. Litvinov since her husband's recall—a political move which set Washington official circles buzzing.

With Mrs. George Rabin, wife of a violinist of the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, and her two children, Michael and Bertine, for company, Mme. Litvinov, is enjoying freedom from all cares and duties which surround a diplomat's wife in Washington. She swims the lake twice a day as a part of a reducing schedule and it seems to be effective, for she says she has lost five pounds since she arrived at the resort and 16 in all. She's giving young Bertine lessons in harmony on the piano; she goes about in slacks and sandals, lets the sunshine on her face and the wind ruffle her hair.

Happy at the thought of going back to Russia, Mme. Litvinov admits she will give up electric refrigerators, constant hot water and other devices which add to the comfort of living. Yet there are compensations, she says. It's my home. I haven't seen my son and daughter for over a year and a half, or my husband for three months."

"What am I taking back to Russia?" A complete set of Jane Austen; two suits, a fur coat, aviation books for my son, art books for my daughter, American cigarettes for my husband and stockings for my friends.

Martha Porter Is Bride of J. R. Weakland, Jr.

Lieut. and Mrs. J. Roy Weakland, jr., whose marriage took place recently in the Brunswick Methodist Church, Brunswick, Ga., are making their home temporarily at St. Simons Island, Ga.

Before her marriage Mrs. Weakland was Miss Martha Moore Porter, daughter of Mrs. Laura Shafer Porter of Fort Edward, N. Y., and Floyd J. Porter, member of the board of examiners-in-chief of the United States Patent Office in Washington.

The bride attended Holton-Arms School here and is a graduate of Brenau College. Lieutenant Weakland is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Weakland of Cleveland, Ohio, and Jamestown, N. Y. He attended Syracuse University and is now in the Army Air Corps.

Mr., Mrs. C. S. Bell Have Visitors

Charles S. Bell, technical assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Bell, have with them for a visit at their home in Chevy Chase, their son-in-law and daughter, Ensign Roy Briand Cowdrey, USN, and Mrs. Cowdrey, who were married July 17 in Jacksonville, Fla.

Ensign Cowdrey was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in June. He is the son of Capt. Roy T. Cowdrey, USN., and Mrs. Cowdrey.

Mrs. Samuel B. Bledsoe of Woodside Park, Md., is vacationing in New York and Providence R. I., for 10 days. During her absence her sons, Carter and Ted, are the guests of Mrs. J. Angus Watson of Silver Spring, Md., at her orchard farm near Martinsburg, W. Va.

Engagement Announced

Underwood & Underwood

MISS EDNA JANE SOUTHWORTH

Capt. R. D. Lyon, U. S. N., and Mrs. Lyon announce the engagement of Mrs. Lyon's daughter, Edna Jane Southworth, to Wing Commander Richard Owen Rhys, R. A. F., son of Dr. and Mrs. L. D. Rhys, of Cardiff, Wales. The prospective bridegroom is stationed in Washington with the combined chiefs of staffs. Miss Southworth is a graduate of Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. The wedding will take place September 9 in the Washington Cathedral

Byrd Clan Meet For Reunion In Washington

A reunion of the famous Byrd family was held in Washington early in the week with the arrival of two servicemen of the clan—Lieut. Harry F. Byrd, jr., USNR, and Pvt. B. Beverly Byrd, USA, paratrooper, on leave from the Second Airborne Infantry Brigade at MacCall, N. C. Only missing member of the family was Sergt. Richard Evelyn Byrd 3d, USA, who is on maneuvers with the Tenth Armored Division in Tennessee.

Senator and Mrs. Harry F. Byrd and their daughter, Miss Westwood Byrd, came up from their home in Virginia for the family reunion and were at the Shoreham Hotel, where they have an apartment. Lieut. Harry F. Byrd, jr., was accompanied from New York by Mrs. Byrd and their young son, Harry 3d. Lieutenant Byrd has been on duty with the Eastern Sea Frontier.

Miss Deibel To Be Married This Evening

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Mae Deibel to Walter Edwin Lawson, USNR, will take place this evening in the McKendree Methodist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tilden Deibel, and Mr. Lawson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lawson. The Rev. C. F. Phillips will officiate at the ceremony and a reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Deibel will have as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Pearson Smith, and other attendants will be Miss Ernestine Deibel, Miss Margaret Halleran and Miss Edith Smith. Harry Ouitt will serve as best man and ushering will be Henry Jones, Robert Burczychi and Paul Deibel.

Mr. Lawson is a graduate of Georgetown University and is attending dental school there.

Cuban Envoy To Join Family at Lake Placid

Senora de Concheso, wife of the Cuban Ambassador, who has been at Lake Placid, N. Y., with her children, will be joined the end of the week by the Ambassador, who is expected to remain over Labor Day with his family. Senora de Concheso left Washington several weeks ago to be with Senora de Batista, wife of the President of Cuba at Lake Placid. Also there with Senora de Concheso is Senorita Consuelo Batista, Attache of the Cuban Embassy who has been there a week and expects to stay on another week or 10 days.

Senora de Batista has returned to Havana.

Mrs. Archbold To Entertain

Mrs. Anne Archbold will entertain members of the United Nations Club at her home at 3905 Reservoir Road Sunday afternoon and evening.

The moving picture "Mayerling," with Danielle Darrieux and Charles Boyer, will be shown outdoors. Swimming and games are planned for the afternoon, followed by a buffet supper. Hours are from 3 to 10 o'clock.

LeNore Simon —Engaged to Wed Donald W. Lutes

Mrs. DeElio Davis Simon announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss LeNore Elizabeth Simon, to Aviation Cadet Donald William Lutes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lutes of Moundsville, W. Va.

The bride-elect, who is with the National Housing Authority, attended Tulane University in New Orleans, where she made her home. She was an active member of Le Petite Theater du Vieux Carre. Her fiance attended Tulane University until last year, when he joined the United States Naval Reserve Training School at Athens, Ga. He is now at Corpus Christi, Tex., where he will receive his wings on October 1.

The wedding will take place in the First Methodist Church of Corpus Christi on October 2 with the Rev. William Wallace, jr. officiating.

Servicemen Are Entertained

Thursday evenings mean a lot to service men stationed in the Silver Spring area, for 25 girls in that suburb entertain weekly at organized dances for them in the Knights of Columbus Hall in Forest Glen.

Miss Margaret Brown directs the entertainment which is host to a larger crowd each week. Sharing expenses, the girls buy refreshments and doughnuts and coffee, which are served by the girls' mothers. Dancing, conga lines, games and singing are a few features of the lively parties.

Major Wallach Is Transferred

Maj. and Mrs. Marshall Wallach and their young son, Marshall Frederick Wallach, who have been in Augusta, Ga., where Major Wallach has been stationed, are in Warrenton, Va., visiting Mrs. Wallach's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Haserick.

Major Wallach has been ordered to duty at Fort Belvoir and during this period Mrs. Wallach will be with her parents.

Washingtonians Now Sojourning In New York City

New York, Aug. 26.—Rear Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey is at the Waldorf-Astoria for a few days from Washington.

Mr. Joseph Bech, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Luxembourg, is also a guest at the Waldorf-Astoria, as is Mrs. Lester Simpson of 5 West Chase Drive, Alexandria, Va., who is accompanied by Miss Ann Simpson.

Other recent arrivals at the Waldorf-Astoria from Washington include Mr. and Mrs. John R. Curry of 910 Shoreham Building, and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne C. Edmister of 1626 K st. nw.

Marines to Be Guests at Dance

The former Fifteenth Provisional Marine Demonstration Troop of Quantico, Va., commanded by Capt. Allen Munro Jones, will be the guests at a party to be given Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. Harry K. Hickey, Miss Mary B. Adams, and Mrs. Albert Jones are hostesses.

Entertainment will include music by several members of the Marine Band from Quantico and a floor show by the volunteer camp shows, sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department of the War Hospitality Committee.

Purely Personal

Army-Navy Award Achieved for Spice, Flavoring Production

It is not for manufacturing of war equipment alone that industry is receiving Army-Navy Production Awards. Our Government is also recognizing the splendid effort put forth by the organizations who are furnishing food for the armed forces.

Recently, this much-coveted Army-Navy "E" pennant was presented to the men and women of the Baltimore plant, McCormick & Co., Inc. This company's contribution in foods includes spices, flavoring extracts, mayonnaise and mustard. In addition to these food items an insecticide powder used overseas to help control the dreaded typhus fever is also being made.

We can all appreciate what the food served to our fighting men and the women auxiliaries would be like if they did not have spices, flavoring extracts and mustard to relieve the monotony. A pumpkin pie without spice, the apple sauce cake often served to the Navy men, would be flat without the dash of spices, the cakes and other desserts would be less appetizing without that appeal furnished by these food adjuncts.

Flavor is certainly the soul of food. And in these wartimes when we are doing without many of the extra-specials in foods, it is comforting to know that we can make homespun foods more enjoyable by the addition of spices such as cloves, cinnamon, celery seed, nutmeg, sage and many others. Vanilla, lemon, almond and other flavoring extracts also impart a special something to foods achieved in no other way. All the way from soups to desserts, savory bits will do wonders. Clam chowder, in the estimation of some cooks, needs thyme, a bay leaf and caraway seeds as much as it needs clams.

The following are some savory hints for the cook when she wants to make the old familiar dishes shine with new lights:

Savory Hints

Apple Dumplings — Sprinkle liberally with cinnamon, sugar and butter before wrapping in pie crust.

Apple Sauce—Stir in a generous grating of nutmeg.

Beef Stew — Takes on a banquet flavor when cooked with a small quantity of pickling spices.

Boiled Potatoes — Make you forget calories when cooked in salted water with two bay leaves.

This five-star dessert—old-fashioned, delicious, attractive, easy-to-prepare, made-in-advance—is the answer to maidless entertaining. With spice cake baked, wine jelly in the refrigerator, and wine ready to uncork, no attention need be focused on dessert until serving time.

Bread Dumplings — With just the suggestion of nutmeg are delicious with fricassee of veal.

Chocolate Desserts — Such as puddings, cakes and pies are improved by adding a pinch of ground cloves.

Cottage Cheese—Mix 2 tablespoons crushed caraway seeds into each cup of cheese. Season plentifully with salt and pepper.

Lamb—Either roast or stewed, is improved by a teaspoon of dried marjoram. Pot Roast—Rub just a little ground ginger on meat at the time you dredge it with flour.

Scalloped Eggplant — A suggestion of sage is very good.

Tomato Juice — Tastes like more when a pinch of powdered marjoram is added.

Let's consider spices and flavoring extracts in some flavorsome dishes. Here's a dinner menu in which spices and flavorings are used.

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Juice Cocktail
Swiss Steak Savory
Succotash Green Beans
Tomato Aspic Salad
Green Apple Pie Iced Coffee

It is ginger, mixed dried herbs, Worcestershire sauce and prepared mustard which makes the difference between an ordinary Swiss steak and the one produced by the following recipe:

SAVORY SWISS STEAK

Cut 2-pound round steak and 2 small kidneys in small pieces. Mix together 8 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon mixed herbs and roll the meat in the mixture. Put all into casserole. Add 1 teaspoon prepared mustard and 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Cover with boiling water and simmer for 2 hours. Add 8 small-sized onions and cook ½ hour longer, or until the onions are done.

Perhaps you want to have fish for the pivotal dish of your dinner. Select some nice filets and then proceed with the following recipe:

FILETS PIQUANT

Lay the filet in a shallow baking dish, the bottom of which is covered with bread crumbs. Pour over the fish a sauce made with the following ingredients:

Sauce—Mix until smooth, 1 tablespoon each of vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup melted butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Pour over the fish. Garnish with paprika. Baste several times. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees for 20 minutes.

Squash is plentiful now and among the vegetables which are not so high priced. Try the addition of cinnamon to your baked squash, such as suggested in the following recipe:

An old-fashioned but very attractive and delicious dessert ideal for maidless entertaining is wine jelly and nut-topped spice cake. The combination of wine jelly and spice cake is a Victorian Sunday night buffet tradition, fine to revive when the food for parties must be planned and prepared in advance. The recipe for making this dessert follows:

SPICE CAKE

Cream ¼ cup of butter or shortening and 1 cup of light brown sugar until smooth. Add 3 well-beaten egg yolks and 1 egg white and ½ cup of maple syrup or molasses. Blend well. Sift 2 cups of all-purpose flour, measure, sift twice with 1 teaspoon soda, ¼ teaspoon allspice, few grains salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon cinnamon or ground cloves and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg. Add to creamed mixture, alternately with ¾ cup of sour milk. Beat only until smooth. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and 1 teaspoon lemon extract (optional). Place in 2 9-inch cake pans, and bake in moderate oven (350-60 degrees) for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool and put layers together and frost with 7-minute frosting: place 2 cups of graulated sugar, few grains cream of tartar, 7 tablespoons of water, 2 egg whites (saved from cake), a few grains of salt and ½ cup chopped walnuts (optional) in top of double boiler over boiling water, and beat constantly with rotary beater until mixture forms a peak when beater is lifted—usually 7 minutes. Spread immediately on cake and sprinkle with nuts. Serves 12.

Apples of good quality are now in the markets. Make a souffle of this fruit and highlight with spices as told in the following recipe:

SPICY APPLE SOUFFLE

Combine 1-3 cup quick-cooking tapioca, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 cups milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, and 1 cup grated raw apple. Cool slightly. Add 3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored and mix well. Fold into three stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish, place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 to 60 minutes, or until souffle is firm. Serve hot with whipped cream. Serves 8.

If you want to have a main dish in the refrigerator, ready and waiting for serving hour, buy a tongue and prepare it in the following way:

JELLIED TONGUE

Soak 2 tablespoons of gelatin in 2 tablespoons of cold water and dissolve in 2 cups of boiling water. Add 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Chill. When the gelatine begins to stiffen, add 2 cups cooked chopped tongue, 2 hard-cooked eggs, 4 tablespoons chopped pickles and ¼ cup mayonnaise which have been mixed together. Chill until firm. Serve with salad dressing. Serves 6.

TROPICAL ORANGEADE

Make a spiced sirup by boiling together 1 cup sugar, a spice bag containing ½ teaspoon ground cloves and ½ teaspoon ground ginger and 1 1-3 cups boiling water. This sirup may be kept indefinitely in the refrigerator and used with orange juice or other fruit juices to make cooling summertime beverages. Add three tablespoons of spiced sirup to 1 cup of orange juice and crushed ice. Serve in tall glass. One serving.

ENGLISH BAKED SQUASH

Place 1 quart of peeled, thinly sliced squash in a well-greased baking dish. Sprinkle with ½ teaspoon salt and 4 tablespoons sugar. Add ½ cup cream and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Bake covered in slow oven about 50 minutes.

Spices can also step up a chilled drink. Here is a recipe where orange juice carries spices with it to make an appealing drink.

Deserted Baby's Mother Aided

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer.

The wife of a widely known Washington surgeon yesterday came to the aid of 23-year-old Mrs. Evelyn Rose Heffner, 1627 Rosedale st. ne., who placed her newborn baby on a vacant lot in the rear of her home just a short time after its birth late Tuesday night.

While the baby girl, weakened by lack of sustenance and exposure, gradually regained her strength at Gallinger Hospital, the mother remained under a physician's care at her home and was cheered by news that the wife of another doctor was eager to help her get her baby back.

Action Withheld

Release of the baby from Gallinger can be authorized only by Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent, who in turn cannot grant that she be turned over to her mother until it is approved by the Women's Bureau of the Police Department. Mrs. Heffner was not charged by police and the District attorney's office is withholding action until she is strong enough to testify.

Meanwhile, through a Post reporter, she was assured that the doctor's wife who is interested in her welfare will assist her in obtaining food and clothes for the child as soon as it is released to her care.

Meanwhile the District's earlier abandoned baby, affectionately known at Gallinger Hospital as "Jimmy Doe" since he was discovered on a doorstep and taken there a month ago, became the temporary ward of the Variety Club of Washington, which is providing for his financial support in his new foster home.

Patricia Morss, director of the placement service of the Board of Public Welfare, told The Post that Jimmy's adopted family is particularly ideal because the wife has had a great deal of training in child care and development and the husband is a Government employe.

Interested Through Post

"Actually the family (whose names are withheld by the Board of Public Welfare) first became interested in little Jimmy through the pictures and stories in The Post," Madorah Donahue, chief of the Protective Service for Children, said yesterday. "They went to see him at Gallinger because they were so anxious to adopt him, but at the time he was suffering from the heat and had a severe case of rash. Mrs. Blank, rather than becoming discouraged, was even more anxious to adopt him, which certainly is a sign that she will make an understanding parent.

Miss Morss pointed out that Jimmy is not actually available for adoption until the District Court determines whether or not his parentage can be established, but added that the couple with whom he now lives stand "an excellent chance" of becoming his legal guardians.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN (we mean moon) will be the new Olmsted Club at Olmsted's Restaurant. Like the night-blooming cereus the Olmsted Club will come into being every night between 10 and 2. A crew of stage hands will take over at 9:30 and in ten minutes transform the restaurant with curtains, painted screens (all fireproofed, thank you), slip covers, lamp shades and leather table tops. In place of sedate Olmsted's there'll be a dizzy bistro done in scarlet, white and emerald. This idea to stop all ideas will be executed by Frank Behrle, who did the Ruban Bleu and Baroque Club in Manhattan. Nothing like it, so far as we can find out, has ever been done before in the history of the world . . . The opening will take place on September 9, be graced by the pick of New York entertainers. More about them later. We're still sitting gaping over the wonder of it all.

Eve Knight of the King Cole Room will open at New York's uppity new Blue Angel on October 4. K. C. Roomers needn't go on the mourners' bench. Evie vows she's coming back, cross her heart.

TREASURE ISLAND will hold its fall opening (with gallons of gala) next Monday when the Mario Hurtado Trio will make its bow, play alternately for dancing with Rocco Terrone's band. This is the first gun in a series of "fall openings" that'll be booming for six weeks.

FOOD FOR THE SOUL AND INNARDS was combined at Rollini's opening at El Patio. Owner Johnny Longo and major domo Joe Michael decided to dazzle the press with victuals as well as rhythm. The upshot was a banquet of many courses that included carved melons, a ham and chicken piece de resistance, ice cream in orange peel cups with a brown meringue a la baked Alaska. The guests gained 5 pounds per each.

Beauteous Dardanelle and her Key Men will close at Mayfair on September 9. The succeeding attraction will be Dick Abbott's Four who ran up a nifty popularity score at Mayfair a few months ago.

TRANSCONTINENTAL TOAST. Ensign Burt Lopatin called up wife Margaret, who's running Burt's Trans-Lux all by her little self, on her birthday from his ship in the Pacific. The call came through at 3 a. m. He said, "Honey, run and get the Scotch and we'll drink a toast together." Now Margaret is wondering "I don't know what the neighbors are thinking if they looked over and saw me drinking liquor at that hour of the morning and with the tears running down my cheeks."

MISSES' DEPARTMENT. Doris Taylor spirituelle singer with Carr and Don's band at the Madrillon, is really a Pennsylvania Dutch lass from Harrisburg, Pa . . . Violinist Jane Marlow of Restaurant 823 has started two big boxes of candy on their way to make a merry Christmas for her best beloved over the sea . . . Joyce James, sprightly organist at Restaurant 400, is building up a fan section terrific . . . Pianist Kay Arden of the Neptune Room goes in for sharply smart black-and-white costumes that make her look like a high-class etching . . . Singer Lorcine Daly of Eddy Rogers' band at Del Rio is at her blonde best in turquoise blue with blimp sleeves.

Nicest rumor of the week is that Georgia and Jerry may stay on at the Anchor Room instead of leaving on September 4. In any case, they're sure to be back in a month or two.

PRIZE LISTENING. "Paper Doll," delightful new-old tune being given a big play by Bob Knight and his crew at the Statler . . . The incredible jiving of "Jelly Bean" Anderson at the Brown Derby . . . The nifty vocal chore that Donnelly James of the Dubonnet Room turns out on that famed oldie, "Bye, Bye Blues" . . . Betsy Jones "Laziest Gal in Town" at the Metronome Room . . . The velvety waltzes played by Harold Nagel's band at the Carlton . . . The flip rhythm of "Sunday, Monday or Always" as given out by Ralph Hawkins' band at Crossroads . . . Myles Hallett's sparkly version of "Wait for Me, Mary" on the Starlight Roof.

Maestro Bill Strickland of the Lotus and Les Colvin, smart pianist of the Pall Mall Room, started in the music business as partners with a three-piece band.

Keep Perspiring Feet Dry and Sweet

Excessive perspiration often makes your feet uncomfortable—socks or stockings damp, as well as causing disagreeable foot odors. Try dusting your feet and shoes with Allen's Foot-Ease. Easy—quick—convenient. It acts to absorb excess perspiration and prevent odors. If you are breaking in a new pair of shoes or if you are wearing an ill-fitting tight pair, there's nothing like Allen's Foot-Ease to relieve the friction that makes feet feel so uncomfortable. For real foot comfort, be sure to ask for Allen's Foot-Ease today! At all druggists.

Asthma Mucus Fought Thru Blood

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Mendaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Mendaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

New Venereal Unit to Be Ready Oct. 1

The new 50-bed addition to the venereal disease hospital at Gallinger will be ready about October 1, with a physician loaned by the United States Health Service in charge, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, Gallinger superintendent.

Dr. Bocock pointed out the venereal disease hospital will be concerned chiefly with treating acute communicable cases and will specialize in administering a rapid five-day treatment which, in most cases, will render the disease noncommunicable.

He said the hospital had secured the services of Dr. Sydney Olansky from the United States Public Health Service, whose salary will be paid by the Federal agency. Dr. Olansky has long been known as a specialist in the treatment of venereal diseases.

The staff for both buildings will number about 35 persons, it was said, with the head physician being assisted by staff physicians of Gallinger. There will be about 10 nurses stationed in the completed unit besides aides, laboratory technicians, clerks, statisticians and orderlies.

Officials Back Grocers' Fine Level of $300

Health Department officials were in full accord yesterday with the impending recommendation of the corporation counsel's office the $25 maximum fine imposed on grocery stores for violations of the sanitary regulations be raised to the $300 level which is the maximum fine for restaurants.

Under an act of 1871 the maximum fine the courts can impose on grocers for violating the sanitary code is $25, while in April of last year a new health act was passed which raised the maximum fine of restaurants to $300.

Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel, said yesterday he saw no reason for the discrepancy in the fines and as soon as he had a chance to study a report submitted to him by Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, he would submit his views to the District Regulation Committee which would in turn make recommendations to the Commissioners.

The seventh restaurant owner to be hailed before the License Board to show cause why his license should not be revoked as the result of numerous violations of the sanitary regulations will have a hearing today at 2 p. m. He is Charles E. Sanford, owner of a restaurant at 62-64 H st. nw., who has forfeited $25 collateral in Municipal Court four times within the past year. This will leave two other cases still pending.

Sam Koenick, a grocer of 200 Rhode Island ave. nw., was fined $25 for having decayed vegetables in his bins and allowing trash to accumulate in the rear of his store. William Leib, a restaurant owner of 822 H st. ne., paid a $25 fine for having unclean drinking utensils. Leon Frazier, a restaurant owner of 500 O st. nw., forfeited $25 collateral for not using a sterilizer and George Mandes, operator of a bottling plant at 413 2d st. nw., forfeited $25 for having dirty working facilities.

Judge Orders OPA Rulings Ignored At Bankrupt Sale

Detroit, Aug. 26 (INS).—A battle to test the legality of OPA price ceilings loomed tonight.

Circuit Court Judge Guy A. Miller instructed attaches of his court to pay no attention to OPA price ceilings.

Judge Miller ordered the receiver for a bankrupt manufacturing concern to sell the firm's machinery at auction to the highest bidder, without regard for price ceiling which, he said, are without legal foundation.

"So far as this court is concerned," Judge Miller said, "the OPA order is of no effect.

"The receiver in this matter will be directed . . . to accept bids at any figure that may be secured, regardless of whether they are above or below the alleged selling prices fixed by the OPA.

"The reason for this instruction is that the office of the OPA is a Federal administrative office, resting, so far as this court is advised, upon executive proclamation.

"There is no statute or act of Congress known to this court which gives the OPA any jurisdiction over the sale of property which is properly in the hands of this court."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

HEY! THE LITTLE BLONDE WHO TURNED OUT TO BE AN ARMY NURSE AND DID SUCH A SWELL JOB WITH THE WOUNDED IS SHOVIN' OFF IN THE ARMY C-54!
THAT'S TOUGH—SHE WAS TOPSIDE STUFF!

Navy Supply Corps — By Milton Caniff

YOUR SENTIMENTS ARE FINE, SHORTY, BUT WE ARE A COMMITTEE IN CHARGE OF SEEING THAT SHE GOES OVER THE SIDE IN STYLE...
SWELL—BUT WHY ARE YOU TELLIN' ME?
BECAUSE YOU HAVE THE ONLY CLEAN UNIFORM THAT WILL FIT HER!
LIKE ALL NAVY FIGHTER PILOTS, ENSIGN FULLER IS TOO MODEST TO OFFER THIS GIFT IN PERSON... BUT HE HOPES YOU WILL ACCEPT IT WITH OUR COMPLIMENTS!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

GOOD EVENING, SHERRY!
BRIAN KENT! WHAT...?
SPECIAL DELIVERY SERVICE, MISS VANCE! AND YOU KNOW THE MOTTO! "NOTHING CAN STOP THE U.S. MAILS..!"
I'M MISERABLE ENOUGH WITHOUT YOUR CHILDISH ANTICS! WILL YOU GO, OR SHALL I CALL AN ORDERLY?
I'LL GO... AFTER I READ YOU THIS LETTER!—IT'S FROM THAT CLINK!

MICKEY FINN — First Stop — By Lank Leonard

EVERYTHING LOOKS ON THE UP AND UP, MICKEY!
SURE—THAT'S HOW THEY FOOL THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT! THEIR CARGOES ARE OKAY WHEN THEIR SHIPS CLEAR HERE—AND OKAY WHEN THEY REACH THEIR NEXT PORT!
WELL, WE KNOW ONE THAT WON'T REACH ITS NEXT PORT!
YOU SAID IT! BUT WE'RE ASHORE TO FIND OUT WHAT WE DON'T KNOW, TOM—AND WE'D BETTER GET STARTED!
THERE'S A CROWD IN THIS JOINT, MICKEY!
OKAY—LET'S GO IN!

MR. AND MRS. — The Radio Isn't So Bad — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

THESE RADIO SONGS ARE TERRIBLE. I WISH WE COULD SING SOME OF THE OLD SONGS
WELL, WHY DON'T WE? WE GOT A PIANO
ALL RIGHT. LET'S TRY. BUT I CAN'T PLAY ANYTHING ANY MORE AND I CAN'T SING ANYTHING BUT IT DOESN'T MATTER
SOMEBODY LOVES ME, HOW DO I KNOW—? SOMEBODY'S E-E-E-Y-E-S HAVE TOLD ME SO
OH, JOE! THAT WAS AWFUL. YOU CAN'T SING NEITHER CAN YOU. LET'S GO BACK AND TURN ON THE RADIO

DIXIE DUGAN — Shake Hands — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

OLD CHIEF WATERY-PUSS BITTER ENEMY—HIM NO LIKE WHITE CLOUD!
IT'S TOO LATE NOW—HE'S SEEN YOU
BESIDES, WHERE'S THAT GREAT FIGHTING SPIRIT YOU CLAIM YOU HAVE??
GAWN YOU!!
I DON'T KNOW WHAT THE BEEF IS, BUT WHY DON'T YOU TWO SHAKE HANDS AND MAKE UP??

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

MYRTLE! HAND MOTHER THAT SOAP OFF THE SINK!
YOU'D BETTER FEED BINGO. HE'S BARKING HIS HEAD OFF!
DON'T DRIP THAT ON THE FLOOR AND WASH YOUR HANDS WHEN YOU COME BACK!
GOSH! I'LL BE ALL BURNED OUT BEFORE I'M FIFTEEN!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Contact Established — By Frank Martinek

DON'T START UNTIL I READ THIS!!
YOU WILL BE MET BY VANDERA AND M-22 OF O.N.I. ASK THEM FOR THE SECRET NUMBER. IF THEY GIVE YOU 739 ALL IS WELL. THEY WILL MAKE ALL ARRANGEMENTS.
WHAT'S THE NUMBER?
WE HAVE ESTABLISHED YOUR HEADQUARTERS IN ELMHURST, A BEAUTIFUL VILLAGE NEAR CHICAGO!
OH FOR THE OPEN SPACES...LILACS, JASMINE AND FRIED CHICKEN—M-M-MM!

JOE PALOOKA — Can't Wait — By Ham Fisher

NADA, I WILL GO AND GET SOMEONE TO HELP CARRY HIM TO CAMP.
HAVE YOU A DOCTOR THERE? THE BULLET MUST BE REMOVED.
THE GOOD DOCTOR PETROVITCH WAS KILLED LAST WEEK—THEY CAUGHT HIM VISITING HIS FAMILY.
WE WILL TAKE HIM TO MY HUT—IT IS CLOSE BY—I WILL REMOVE THE BULLET.
CAREFUL-CAREFUL OL' TREAD LIGHTLY—'TIS NOT A BAG OF GRAIN YOU CARRY.
OUR ORDERS ARE TO ALWAYS WAIT FOR STRETCHER BEARERS—WE—QUIET—WE CANNOT WAIT IN THIS CASE!!
WHY SHOULD I LET A WOMAN GIVE ME ORDERS?

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

WHY, TEX! WHERE'S THE LAMP BASE! THE VASE OF THE FOUR DWARFS?
AH—ER—SOLD IT, MINNIE-HA-CHA!
THAT'S A WHOPPER!—BUT AH CAIN'T TELL HER AH CHUCKED IT IN TH' CISTERN!
SOLD IT?
YEAH! TH' CURIO DEALER'S WIFE WAS HERE—AN' SHE WAS KINDA CUT UP—SO AH LET HER HAVE TH' PESKY THING!
SHE PAID ME $25—HERE IT IS!—HOPE YUH AIN'T SORE?
IT'S ALL RIGHT, TEX—!
HMM! THIS IS ODD!—WHY WOULD I BE GETTING MAIL FROM THE POTOMAC THEATRE?

JANE ARDEN — Interested Eavesdroppers — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

IT MUST BE A PLOT—EVERY TIME I'M ALL SET TO GIVE AWAY MONEY IT TURNS OUT THEY DON'T NEED IT—YOUR JOB IS TO HELP ME GIVE IT AWAY—NOT FIND REASONS WHY SHOULDN'T!
SH! SOMEONE WILL HEAR YOU!
DID YOU HEAR WHAT I HEARD?
I'D LIKE TO HEAR MORE—WHO IS HE?
I DON'T KNOW—BUT I'LL FIND OUT—
MAYBE THIS IS OUR CUE TO MOVE IN—

DONALD DUCK — First Aid to the Injured — By Walt Disney

WELL, I GET IT! I WAS HERE FIRST!
OH, YEAH? I WAS TEN INCHES AHEAD OF YUH!
OH, YEAH!
TAKE THAT!
OKAY, LET'S HAVE IT!
WALT DISNEY

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

WHERE IS LOIS LANE???
GOSH, MR. KENT—ALL I SAID WAS, "WHERE'S LOIS LANE?"
AND I SAID I WISHED I KNEW! CAN'T YOU LEAVE ME ALONE?—I'VE GOT TO THINK THIS OUT!
LOIS HASN'T REPORTED FOR WORK, NOBODY'S SEEN HER, SHE NO LONGER LIVES WHERE SHE USED TO LIVE—AND THE OTHER TENANTS NEVER HEARD OF HER! EVEN HER FORMER TELEPHONE NUMBER SEEMS NEVER TO HAVE BEEN HERS! THIS CALLS FOR SOME SUPER-SLEUTHING!
THE REPORTER RETIRES TO A STOREROOM AND ASSUMES HIS IDENTITY AS SUPERMAN. PRESENTLY...
I HAVE TO SEARCH—EVERYWHERE—I HAVE TO FIND LOIS—SOMEHOW—
BUT AFTER LONG HOURS OF FRUITLESS SEARCH...
EVEN WITH THE AID OF SUPER-SPEED AND X-RAY VISION, IT WOULD TAKE DAYS—WEEKS TO COMB THE CITY OF METROPOLIS. BUT SOMEHOW I'VE GOT TO ANSWER THE QUESTION: "WHERE IS LOIS LANE?"
THE DAILY

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Clifford McBride

STEALING THAT OUTFIT WAS A CINCH!
MA FOI! YOUR HORSE EES WILD! HE RUNS AWAY WITH THE SEECK MAN!
HE SPURRED ROGUE! I SAW HIM!
COME BACK WITH MY HORSE!
NOW I WEEL MAKE MY GETAWAY!
MISTER, YOU'VE GOT TO HELP ME—NO—HE'S GONE, TOO! I'VE BEEN ROBBED!

GOING BACK TO HIGH SCHOOL

First impressions are important, and though you may deserve the Army-Navy "E" for the war work you did this summer, you've got to rate the "Hi" crowd's "A" for the way you look at school . . . Do it in one of these outfits from The Hecht Company . . . All the guys and gals go for corduroy, smoothly tailored and solid in warmth . . . Try out for the Glee Club in a soft jacket and skirt in a mouth watering pastel . . . Watch the lads clamor to see you home when you wear your Churchill pea jacket . . . And here's something for the boys . . . A lightweight windbreaker, designed to keep the wind out, the warmth in . . . A subdued plaid jacket in a masculine tweed . . . Slacks, cut with precision, in colors and fabrics to wear with all your separate jackets and sweaters . . . All these and many more from our collection of back-to-school clothes, designed to focus all eyes on you.

YOU'LL GET AN "A" RATING IN THIS CORDUROY JUMPER . . .

Warm, rich-waled corduroy fashions a classic jumper, darling to the Teens. It has a surplice bodice to mold your figure and show off your pretty shirts and sweaters. Huge patch pockets at the hips hold your pencils and odd change. Royal, green and red. Sizes 10 to 16.
